U. S. AROUSED OVER JAPAN'S STEPS IN CHINA

Shanghai Mayor Reported Planning to Quell "Anti" Societies.

TOKYO DISPATCHES 13 MORE VESSELS

Defense Council Is Planned in Nanking; Fighting in Harbin Is Bloody.

(Associated Press.)

Chinese newspapers in Shanghai said today Mayor Wu Teh-Chen would inform Japanese officials that he was undertaking to curb "unlawful activities" of anti-Japanese societies which had brought a threat of Shanghai's occupation. The report indicated that an amicable settlement of the crisis arising from recent disorders and boycotts against Japanese was likely.

Japanese consular and naval officials had demanded dissolution of the hostile Chinese societies and redress for attacks on Japanese. Earlier reports have indicated that the Chinese mayor was inclined to accede to all the demands, excepting that for a stop to the anti-Japanese activities.

13 More Ships Sent.

Night clubs and hotels in Shanghai were thronged last night as thirteen more ships of war bore down on the city from Japan, prepared to enforce Tokyo's demand.

The foreign colony in Shanghai, convinced that trouble was imminent, still carried on its affairs as usual.

Japanese officials prepared to protect their nationals by gathering them into the international settlement. Settlement authorities declared no Chinese would be given refuge there and that they were ready to repulse any inrush by residents of the native city.

Bloody Action in Manchuria.

Meanwhile a Rengo News Agency dispatch from Harbin, Manchuria, said fighting broke out today between troops of Ting Chao, former commander of Chinese Eastern Railway guards, and Kirin provincial forces. Hostilities between the Kirin troops, numbering 7,000, and Ting Chao's men, estimated at 5,000, broke out at the edge of the Chinese quarter of Harbin, the dispatch said.

A bitter street battle in which 45 Chinese were killed and in which Ting Chao's troops were involved was reported from Harbin yesterday.

Mukden received dispatches saying about 200 Chinese irregulars had been killed Sunday in a clash with Japanese troops northwest of Tahushan.

In Geneva the League of Nations Council decided to make representations to the Chinese and Japanese governments regarding the necessity of avoiding any activities which might aggravate the situation at Shanghai.

Defense Council Planned.

A council of national defense, probably to be headed by former President Chiang Kai-Shek, was planned in Nanking.

Japan's continued operations in China are arousing growing uneasiness in Washington, and officials are considering what further step can be taken for the protection of American interests.

There are some in high administration circles who favor a far more drastic and decisive course than that which has been followed. Others oppose it.

The question has been discussed repeatedly around the Cabinet table, with President Hoover withholding final judgment. Secretary Stimson took the question up with the Chief Executive privately again at the White House late yesterday.

Calm Conciliation Policy.

The Secretary is one of the President's advisers who has held consistently to a policy of calm conciliation.

Just as the American fleet is preparing to begin maneuvers around

Another Baby Shot In New York Battle

2-Year-Old Victim Is Near Death After Police Fight Gangsters.

New York, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—A 2-year-old baby was near death in Brooklyn tonight, the innocent victim of a pistol battle between police and gangsters.

The child, Howard Engle, lay in his perambulator near his parents' home when two cars ground to a stop at the curb. Three men in the first car jumped out and fled toward an areaway. The second car contained four detectives. Reports as to how the shooting started were vague, but witnesses said there were a number of shots. One bullet pierced the perambulator and lodged in the child's chest.

The gangsters were arrested and the police said one was identified as "Bugsby" Goldstein, alleged foe of the late Meyer and Irving Shapiro in the slot machine racket. Both the Shapiros were killed several months ago.

York Named To Post Held By Maj. Robb

The transfer of Lieut. Robert E. York, Corps of Engineers, from Fort Logan, Colo., to the Engineer Department of the District of Columbia, was announced late yesterday by the War Department. Lieut. York will succeed Maj. H. L. Robb as Assistant Engineer Commissioner in charge of building construction, according to Capt. H. L. Oram, assistant acting as Engineer Commissioner, yesterday.

Lieut. York is one of the youngest officers of the Engineer Corps ever to be assigned to the position of Assistant Engineer Commissioner and is probably the first lieutenant ever to hold such a post.

Maj. D. A. Davison, Acting Engineer Commissioner, was in Chicago yester-

BAKER LOOMING AS DARK HORSE OF DEMOCRATS

Change in League Views Advances Ohioan as 1932 Possibility.

By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD.

As a result of his "surprise" statement yesterday banning the League of Nations as a partisan issue, Newton D. Baker, of Ohio, has placed himself in the political paddock reserved for dark horse possibilities for the 1932 Democratic presidential nomination.

That, at least, is the view taken here by some politicians.

"Evidently his hat is in the ring," said Senator Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio, chairman of the Republican national committee.

Mr. Baker, the man most feared by the supporters of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, was conceded six months ago to have the best chance of capturing the nomination in the event Mr. Roosevelt failed to line up the necessary two-thirds of the convention delegates and a deadlock ensued.

Then he began to advocate American membership in the League of Nations. It almost amounted to a crusade. Such is the antagonism to the league in this country, it was

Victory Fund Plea Is Made by Shouse

Democratic Chairman Asks Liberal Contributions to Presidential Drive.

(Associated Press.)

An appeal for contributions to finance the Democratic presidential campaign was broadcast last night by Jouett Shouse, chairman of the party's national executive committee.

Urging liberal contributions to the $1,500,000 "victory campaign," Mr. Shouse said the Democrats are "politically in a position never stronger."

"I think Democrats everywhere concede the usefulness of the work that has been carried on by our national headquarters in Washington since the spring of 1929," he said. "If that work can be properly expanded and enlarged during the succeeding six months we shall have the election won before our nominating convention is held—and that can only be done through the success of the victory drive."

Mr. Shouse said Chairman Raskob, of the national committee, had pledged $100,000 and Vincent Astor and Pierre S. duPont $25,000 each.

SALVADOR TORN BY NEW RIOTS; MANY ARE DEAD

Week-End Casualties Are Listed at 5,000 as Four Towns Capitulate.

WARSHIPS PROTECT FOREIGN RESIDENTS

Government Forces Report Recapture of Places Taken by Rebels.

New York, Jan. 26 (U.P.).—Rioting broke out again late today in the city of San Salvador, capital of the smallest Central American republic, according to private advices received here, which estimated casualties in week-end fighting as high as 5,000.

Details of the fighting in the capital, which was the objective of a so-called Communistic uprising over the week-end, were lacking.

The chief disturbances have occurred in the interior. All communication with San Salvador and La Libertad was interrupted at 4 p. m. Efforts of cable company officials to restore the lines were not immediately successful.

Rebel Success Reported.

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, Jan. 26 (A. P.).—Rebels have succeeded in seizing four towns in the republic of Salvador and were attacking two others, dispatches from San Salvador said tonight. The towns reported to have fallen were Metapan, La Libertad, Sonsonate and Ahuachapam.

Latest dispatches said the rebels were attacking San Miguel and Chalatenango. The Salvadorean Minister here denied the revolution had any connection with Communism.

It was reported that a battle had been going on for two days in the vicinity of Santana and that the result still remained uncertain. In the vicinity of San Salvador the government forces were reported to have captured hundreds of prisoners, although sporadic fights still were going on.

British Aid Declined.

David Rodgers, British charge d'affaires, appealed to Provisional President Maximiliano Martinez for permission to land the marines to protect British interests. The president replied that he was well able to take care of the lives and property of both natives and foreigners.

Salvador is a country of small landowners, chiefly engaged in coffee-growing. It is about the size of the State of Maryland and has a population of 1,650,000.

The present government, headed by Gen. Max H. Martinez, came into power about a month ago when the regime of President Aturo Araujo was overthrown. Recognition has been withheld by the United States.

(Associated Press).

The State Department was informed last night government forces in El Salvador had retaken Juayua Izalco and other towns from rebels and there was a "noticeable improvement in the situation."

This information was transmitted to the department by William J. McCafferty, American Charge d'Affaires in El Salvador.

The two American destroyers patroling Salvadorean waters as a result of so-called Communist uprisings, were shifted yesterday from Acajutla to La Libertad, leaving two Canadian warships to control the situation at the former port.

Foreign Protection Broadened.

State Department officials said the change was made at the request of Charge d'Affaires McCafferty, in order to broaden the protection afforded foreigners in El Salvador by the four warships. No armed forces have been landed, the department was informed, but the ships are

4 AMERICANS ARE INDICTED IN HONOLULU

Mrs. Fortescue and Three Naval Men Cited in Second Degree.

JURY ACTS AS JUDGE REFERS TO ANARCHY

Defense Attorney Will Seek Quashing of Charges on Grounds of Coercion.

Honolulu, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Prodded into action by a judge's reference to anarchy, the Honolulu grand jury today indicted Mrs. Granville Fortescu, society matron, and three Navy men for second-degree murder in the lynching of Joseph Kahahawai, alleged woman attacker.

The inquisitorial body, which apparently had attempted last week to return a negative report in the case, submitted the indictment only after Circuit Judge A. M. Cristy had raised a question of anarchy and told its individual members they should retire from the jury if they could not reconcile their convictions with the testimony and the law.

Montgomery Winn, defense attorney, announced immediately he would file a motion tomorrow to quash the indictment on the ground coercion had been used to make the grand jury return the formal accusation.

Climax to Crime Series.

Kahahawai was lured from the Judiciary Building January 8, abducted and slain. The lynching provided an amazing climax to a succession of crimes which had stirred the community.

Those indicted with Mrs. Fortescue are Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, U. S. N., and E. J. Lord and Albert O. Jones, enlisted Navy man. Kahahawai was one of five men awaiting retrial on charges of attacking Mrs. Massie, wife of the lieutenant and daughter of Mrs. Fortescue.

Pending legal action, the four accused have been held in the custody of naval officers at Pearl Harbor. The defense recently sought dismissal of a police court murder charge against the four on the ground the prosecution had been dilatory in proceeding against them.

Transcript Made Public.

A transcript of grand jury proceedings of last Friday, made public today, indicated Judge Cristy had refused to accept a return from the inquisitorial body, but the nature of the return was not set forth. Reports had been circulated it was a "no bill," indicating the grand jury's disinclination to formally accuse the alleged slayers.

The transcript showed Judge Cristy had said:

"If a crime has been committed, the identity of the criminal known, and that it is criminal to the sense of the technical provision of the law, and the grand jury for reasons refuses to present an indictment

Smith Denies Plan To See Roosevelt

Announcement Made by Governor on Meeting Is Contradicted.

New York, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Less than 24 hours after Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt announced he and former Gov. Alfred E. Smith would meet in Albany within two weeks word came from Smith's office tonight that he had no intentions of leaving the city this month or next.

Roosevelt said last night he had heard from Smith that the latter would be in Albany within a week or two to visit his daughter and that he planned to call on the governor at that time. Smith made no direct comment on Roosevelt's statement that they would meet, but a secretary announced definitely that he had no plans to go to Albany or anywhere else out of the city.

The former governor has not indicated in any way his attitude toward Roosevelt's candidacy. He had luncheon with the governor at the Roosevelt town house on November 18, but when he left he said they had "talked State finances." They have not met since then.

CUT ASSURED IN GAS AND ELECTRIC RATES

New Schedule of Charges Is Proposed by Companies Serving Capital.

District consumers of gas and electricity were virtually assured reductions in both commodities by developments yesterday. The Public Utilities Commission, at the close of a two-day public hearing, took under advisement commercial electric rate schedules proposed by the Potomac Electric Power Co., after announcing a block system of domestic rates. The Washington Gas Light Co. has proposed a definite schedule of reductions in rates and expects it will be approved by the board of directors not later than Tuesday.

Announcement of the proposed cut in gas rates was made last night by People's Counsel Richmond B. Keech, after a telephone conversation with George A. G. Wood, president of the gas company, who gave permission for the plans to be revealed. As a consequence, Mr. Keech agreed to withhold the petition he planned to submit to the Public Utilities Commission this week regarding increased profits reported by the gas company for the first eleven months of last year.

The old electric light domestic rate was 4.2 cents per kilowatt hour. Under schedule A, which also applies to metropolitan areas in nearby Maryland, beginning next Monday the primary household rate will be 3.9 cents per kilowatt hour, for the first 50 hours. For the next 50 hours the rate will be 3.8 cents, while the remainder will be 3 cents.

People's Counsel Keech had proposed a flat rate of 3.7 cents per kilowatt hour after the power company had suggested a primary 4-cent rate with a secondary rate of 2.5 cents after the first 100-kilowatt hours.

Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick, chairman of the commission, announced that the primary rate will cut $163,278 from the electric bills of 58,835 consumers, constituting an average reduction of 7 per cent. The second-

Dealer, Suspecting Holdup Joke, Shot

Merchant Gravely Hurt by One of Three Bandits; Escape in Car.

Three bandits, who had been fired upon 30 minutes earlier as they escaped from a delicatessen store they had held up, early today shot and gravely wounded another delicatessen store clerk when he treated their attempts to rob him as a joke. The injured man is Israel Finkelstein, 50 years old, of 500 Twelfth street northeast. He was taken to Sibley Hospital with a bullet in his side.

The bandits first appeared at the store of Arnold Yanovick, at 1123 S street northwest, where they got $7 from the till and fled. Yanovick got his own pistol and fired at them as they got in an automobile.

Thirty minutes later they appeared at 1012 First street northeast, where Finkelstein was tending store for his brother-in-law, Meyer Ulitizky. Finkelstein said that he thought the whole thing was a joke, but when he delayed one of the men snatched out a pistol and fired point-blank. His brother-in-law found him on the floor a few minutes later.

Senate Group Defers Vote on Hale Navy Bill

(Associated Press.)

The Senate naval committee yesterday deferred a vote on the Hale bill to authorize building the American Navy up to the limits fixed by the London treaty.

Chairman Hale, author of the measure, said he still hoped to get it through and that no proposal was made to follow the steps of the House committee in holding it up for reasons of economy. The bill would authorize an annual expenditure of about $70,000,000 for keeping the Navy intact and modern, chiefly for replacements.

$56,742 MORE GIVEN IN CHEST CAMPAIGN

$1,753,835 of $2,601,000 Goal Now Pledged to Relief Workers.

Creeping closer to its goal of $2,601,000 by $56,742.98, the Community Chest, at yesterday's report meeting at the Willard, received reports increasing the total to date to $1,753,835.11. Clarence A. Aspinwall, chairman of the special gifts unit, reported gifts of $2,320; former Commissioner Sidney P. Taliaferro, chairman of the schools unit, reported $2,443; Lloyd B. Wilson, chairman of the group solicitation unit, reported $13,218.25; and H. L. Rust, jr., chairman of the metropolitan unit, reported gifts totaling $37,861.73. This leaves $847,164.89 to be raised by these units before next Monday night.

Mrs. Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey, "Lady Mayor" of Washington by reason of her position as chairman of the House District committee, who was present at the luncheon, greeted the workers as "My adopted family"; the representative from New Jersey expressed her pride in her adopted family for the work being undertaken on behalf of the Community Chest.

"As a welfare worker in my city and State for 25 years, I know just how you feel," she said. "No matter what else you do, there is no satisfaction like that of counting up, at the end of the day, the money you have collected for the Community Chest. No other feeling can be so great as that of having done something for the less fortunate of your city.

"I have been in Washington six years and have read in the papers of your splendid work for charity. I know the feeling. I have been interested in welfare work in my city and State for 25 years. I recall some eighteen years ago starting forth to raise funds for a day nursery in my home city. I was discouraged by friends at the start, but I say to you that of all the honors that have come to me (and I consider it a distinct honor to sit in the House of Representatives), none has given me the thrill that I received when, at the end of the first day's campaign, I

U. S. AGAIN ATTACKS INFLATION OF MONEY

Europeans Have Erroneous Conception of Policy, Officials Point Out.

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.

Unequivocal assurances that the United States will not embark upon a policy of monetary inflation were repeated yesterday in the highest official circles.

New currency issues to meet the Federal deficit, or to ease commercial credits with unsound money, never have been considered, and nothing contemplated in the program of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation justifies the assumption that the Government would countenance such a step.

Misunderstanding in Europe concerning the purposes of the reconstruction credit machinery are attributed by Government officials here to an erroneous conception of the fiscal policy involved. In several countries this misunderstanding has been aggravated by the painful recollection of the continent's disastrous postwar inflation.

In the numerous conferences which paved the way for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, President Hoover insisted from the outset that its function should be merely to ease the flow of normal credits, chiefly through elimination of the fears which have led to unprecedented hoarding throughout the United States during the last year.

At the present time, Government

Gas Is Fatal to Two Bringing Cabs Here

Several Others Made Ill by Monoxide Fumes During Trip.

Twenty-five yellow taxicabs, the first of a fleet of light taxicabs slated for use in the threatened rate war, arrived last night at the Yellow Cab garage on Twenty-fourth street near M street northwest. The drivers left immediately by bus for Lansing, Mich., to bring in another fleet.

Two drivers of the fleet were killed and several were made ill yesterday by monoxide poisoning at Mechanicsburg Gap, W. Va. The dead are: Ronald Beck, 22 years old, and Roy Calder, 25 years old, both of Lansing, according to an Associated Press dispatch. The men slept in the cabs and kept the motors running for warmth.

The cabs were hidden from public view at the garage. No one would confirm or deny reports that the cabs were to be painted with 15-cent zone rate signs as a beginning of a taxicab war.

BRITONS FIGHT TO RESCUE 54 IN SUBMARINE

Disabled Craft Believed Found in Channel by Searching Ships.

OFFICIALS HOPEFUL MEN ARE NOT DEAD

Boat Went Below Yesterday Morning at 10:30 o'Clock for Practices.

(Copyright, 1932, by the Associated Press.)

Portland, England (Wednesday), Jan. 27 (A.P.).—The British submarine M-2 dived near Portland yesterday, failed to rise and early today was feared to be lying disabled at the bottom of the English Channel with 54 men aboard.

Searching ships, rushed to the scene, touched an object with their instruments which they believed to be the vessel. It was in 17 fathoms of water 3 miles west of Portland Bill, a rocky promontory, and gave a metallic ring when struck.

It could not be established before daylight if the object really was the submarine. Meanwhile, an anxious crowd on the coast watched a circle of flickering lights from the flotilla of salvage craft about 3 miles off Chesil Beach.

Has Evil Reputation.

West Bay—which locally has the sinister name of Dead Man's Bay—is the area where the search was conducted. It has an evil reputation owing to many wrecks.

The submarine went down at 10:30 a. m. in routine practice exercises. Sailors dashed out of Portland's movie theaters a few hours later, under orders canceling their shore leave and rushing them to their ships.

Rumors that something was wrong had spread throughout this naval port before the movie programs were suddenly interrupted for the reading of the order. Wives, mothers and sweethearts of the submarine's crew, most of whom come from Portland or Portsmouth, the large English naval base nearby, became agitated as the hours passed and some of them broke into weeping.

Called Fine Diving Ship.

The M-2, a sister ship of the M-1 which was lost in a collision in November, 1925, with a loss of 68 lives, has been popular in the British navy as a "fine diving ship."

A small airplane was in a watertight hangar in the submarine when she sank.

Lieut. Comdr. J. D. De M. Leathes was listed in the last navy roster as commander of the M-2, whose home port is Portsmouth. It was not known just how many men were aboard when she took the dive, but her normal complement is 6 officers and 48 men.

An official at headquarters of the commander in chief at Portsmouth said the M-2 was engaged in routine exercises when she disappeared. The sea was calm, but there was a fog.

Life-Saving Devices.

The M-2 is equipped with the latest life-saving devices, he pointed out. Admiralty quarters in London said the ship's wireless might have failed, but even in that case she should have returned to port long ago.

While admiralty officials saw no reason to abandon hope, they said it would be idle to suggest there were not grounds for the gravest misgivings.

The latest Navy list gave Lieut. Comdr. J. D. de M. Leathes, as commander of the M-2, whose home port is Portsmouth.

R. H. Davis, inventor of the escape apparatus with which the M-2 is equipped and by means of which some of the crew escaped from the British submarine when she sank in the China seas last year, said it was needless to abandon hope.

No Suggestion of Collision.

There was no suggestion, he said, that there had been a collision or that the hull of the M-2 had been damaged. He suggested that the crew might be repairing machinery which probably had been damaged.

Even if there was damage which could not be repaired, he said, the men had every chance to escape by way of the safety apparatus. Naval

Montgomery County Pupils Urged to Enter Essay Test

Maj. E. Brooke Lee Points Out That George Washington Had Many Friends in Surrounding Communities; Many More Applications Received.

"Students of public, private and parochial schools in Montgomery County are taking a real interest in The Post Washington Essay Contest," yesterday declared Maj. E. Brooke Lee, Montgomery County Democratic leader, member of the State roads commission, former speaker of the Maryland House of Delegates and manager of Gov. Ritchie's last campaign.

"There is every reason why they should show enthusiasm for the contest," he said, "for Montgomery County, historic ground for many other reasons, was familiar territory to George Washington in his lifetime and he had many friends among the county folk of his day. We feel grateful in Montgomery County that our school children are going to share in The Post Washington Essay contest and stand a chance to win some of the outstanding prizes offered by The Post for the best essays.

"Such contests as that instituted by The Post will go far in stimulating the study of George Washington during his bicentennial on the part of school children. The spirit of wholesome competition in the contest intensifies the attempt of each child to put into his or her own words something of the story of the father of his country all have been taught to revere.

"For my part, I find it worth while to watch the progress of the contest closely and I hope that when the judges announce their final decision the names of Montgomery County boys and girls will be found among the winners."

Maj. Lee's comments are akin to those of other civic leaders in Montgomery County as well as educators and the parents of children eligible to compete.

The classrooms where the pupils are engaged in the contest are eager to see if some one of their number wins one of the beautiful bronze plaques of George Washington offered to the eight first and second prize winners through the coopera-

President and Wife Hosts To 1,000 at House Reception

The members of the House of Representatives, without their leader, the Speaker, were the reception guests last night of President and Mrs. Hoover. It was a very "cozy" reception, though not as small a one as that of last week in honor of the members of the Senate. There were something over 1,000 guests, including Army and Navy officers, and, as usual, many from the resident circles of Washington.

There were more missing than Representatives, for Vice President Curtis and his sister, who follow the President and Mrs. Hoover in the little procession to the blue parlor, were absent; also the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Wilbur, Secretary Hyde and Secretary Lamont. Mrs. Hyde was escorted by Secretary Mellon and Mrs. Lamont by Lieut. Col. James Ulio, military aid at the White House.

The receiving party was not prompt as usual, but were fifteen minutes late in descending the stairs, but after they entered the blue room everything went speedily. Mrs. Hoover was exceptionally lovely in a stately gown of very dark wine-colored velvet, made plainly and with a point-

Cyr, Seeking Governorship, Invades Louisiana's Capital

Foe of Huey Long Lays Siege to Baton Rouge With Forces in Face of Armed Guards Who Are Protecting State Offices.

Baton Rouge, La., Jan. 26 (U.P.).—The second "battle of the governors" broke out in full fury tonight when Dr. Paul N. Cyr, backed by a strong force of politicians, invaded the capital, set up headquarters and took the formal oath as governor in a test of strength with the ruling executive, Alvin O. King.

Armed vigilance about Louisiana State offices and officials was increased as dread enemies of the administration concentrated here. Political observers looked on expectantly as Cyr's force promised to give the State a "few good funerals" if necessary, to win recognition.

Cyr, who claims he is the legal governor and that King is an "usurper," went to district court and demanded that he be administered the governor's oath. A deputy clerk complied.

Cyr took the record of his oath to his attorneys and they went with it to the office of Miss Alice Crosjean, secretary of State, and demanded it be duly recorded.

"We already have a governor," said the secretary, refusing to accept the record.

"Very well, we have complied with the law by formally presenting it," said the attorney.

Then Cyr and his followers drafted a formal demand for "Go." King, ordering him to vacate the governor's mansion. The letter was registered and placed in the mails.

That accomplished, the Cyrites climbed aboard an automobile and went back to New Orleans, where the dentist-governor has been mapping his plans of action the past several days.

The raid on the Capital was made in the face of threatening gun muzzles, more than a score of highway patrolmen and detectives having been stationed about the State office at King's command, with orders to keep the insurgents out.

It was an uprising against the pow-

RAIL WORKERS DELAY VOTE ON PAY REDUCTION

Opposition to Stand of Road Officials Puts Off Decision.

JOB ASSURANCE AIM OF UNION LABORERS

Less Than Half of Groups at Conference Have Acted on Plan.

Chicago, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—No progress was made tonght by railroad labor chiefs debating the proposed 10 per cent wage reduction.

David B. Robertson, labor spokesman, said the situation remained unchanged from that announced by him Monday when he reported ten unions had reached a decision and the remaining eleven were undecided.

The various labor groups will reconvene separately in the morning, he said, in another effort to arrive at decisions. The leaders will meet in the afternoon to make reports.

Robertson intimated the railroads' reply to the unions' unemployment program was the chief stumbling block in reaching a decision.

Want Work Assurance.

There was a great deal of discouragement among the union men, he said, because the managements had gone no further than to promise to stabilize employment "as conditions may justify."

The position of labor has been that if rail workers give up some $215,000,000 of their pay envelopes, a large share of that should go to employing more men. Robertson said some of the men felt the presidents could have made more definite assurances of the amount of labor they would require during the next year.

There appeared to be no disposition today to hurry the union vote, either on the part of the labor executives or the railroad presidents, who had asked for the reduction as an "essential step" to the improvement of railway credit and a general revival of business.

Await Joint Session.

The presidents, awaiting labor's answer, held themselves in readiness to attend a joint session on short notice. Some of them had been making reservations to return to their homes from day to day, but there appeared to be no impatience at the delay. All agreed it was an important decision that required a large amount of deliberation.

After the labor leaders had met today and discovered that no additional unions were ready to report, the various groups resumed their discussions.

Until all have reported and the union negotiators have met with the presidents, the result of the votes was to be kept secret.

France Suspends U. S. Radio Buying

Importing of Electrical Machinery Also Hit by Ruling.

Paris, Jan. 26. (A.P.).—American exports of electrical machinery to France were badly hit and the importation of American radios was suspended under quota regulations published today.

The electrical machinery quotas assigned to the United States were 37.1 metric tons for a three-months period, as compared with 224 tons for Germany, 118.8 for Switzerland, 40.2 for Great Britain, 9.4 for Sweden and 57.7 for other countries.

The importation of wireless telegraphic and telephonic sets from the United States was suspended until further orders. The Official Gazette notified importers that the quarterly quota for radio tubes and valves from the United States, Germany and other countries, except Great Britain and Holland, had been exhausted and no more could be imported until April 1.

LIEUT. ROBERT YORK SUCCEEDS MAJ. ROBB day because of the illness of his mother and consequently could not be reached for comment on the transfer.

Maj. Robb was transferred suddenly last week to the office of the chief engineer in the War Department, and he left the District Building on Monday of this week. No official explanation was given for his sudden transfer though he achieved a reputation for speeding the District's construction program.

Although only 35 years old, Lieut. York has had more than 14 years' experience in the Engineer Corps and probably would hold the rank of captain, according to Capt. Oram, were it not for the unusual military demobilization following the World War.

Lieut. York is a graduate of West Point Military Academy, having finished with the special two-year war class in Nvoember, 1918. Prior to that time he saw service with the Infantry of the Colorado National Guard as a private, presumably on the Mexican border. He was graduated in the basic and civil engineering courses at Fort Humphreys in 1921.

The War Department's order is effective on February 10. Lieut. York is expected a few days after that date in Washington.

Hitler Guarded Heavily From Militant Radicals

Dusseldorf, Germany, Jan. 26 (U.P.).—A heavy police guard protected Adolph Hitler, German Fascist leader, tonight after a violent Communist demonstration against him at the Park Hotel.

The demonstrators shouted, "Down with Hitler! Death to Hitler!" when the militant Fascist leader arrived to speak to leaders of Germany's heavy industries. Police clashed with the demonstrators outside the hotel, injuring several before they were driven back.

AT HEARING ON AKRON

HOUSE GROUP ASKS VIEWS OF FILIPINOS

Roxas Expresses Opposition of Independence Mission to Plebiscite.

Members of the Philippine Independence Mission in Washington pressing for passage of legislation granting independence to the islands were requested yesterday by the House committee on insular affairs to present amendments which would embrace the Filipino point of view to the proposed legislation now being considered.

The request was made following considerable discussion at yesterday's meeting of the committee as to the objections that the Filipinos might have to some of the proposed bills.

The questioning of Speaker Manuel Roxas by Representative Charles L. Underhill, of Massachusetts, developed the fact that the Filipinos would welcome a period during which economic adjustments may be made between the two countries after the transfer of political power which can be effected in two years. But independence would be accepted without any such economic transition.

Questioning of the Filipino leader also revealed that the islands interpret the phrase "immediate independence" to mean the period within which liquidation of the affairs of the two nations can be brought about. Speaker Roxas estimated that a constitution could be drafted, ratified, and the elections under it held within two years.

Speaker Roxas also expressed opposition of the independence mission to a plebiscite provided for in some of the suggested bills. It was his contention that the Filipinos are a unit for independence and that a plebiscite would only confuse the situation. He said, however, the Filipinos would accept such a condition if Congress demanded it.

Before adjourning until Friday morning, the committee received a statement from Dr. Hilario Moncado, president of the Filipino Federation of America, who appeared in behalf of the Crail bill, which would fix the date of Philippine independence as July 4, 1933.

Employment Gains In U. S. Revealed

Report Shows Increased Activities in Several Industries.

(Associated Press.)

Some improvement in employment conditions in several major industries was recorded yesterday in the monthly report of the United States Employment Service for December.

Iron and steel mills in some sections increased forces and plants manufacturing tools stepped up production schedules. An upward trend was noted in boot and shoe factories. A substantial increase in employment characterized the automobile industry.

In a number of instances, the tool, dye and pattern-making shops worked overtime.

General conditions in the boot and shoe industry remained below normal, however.

The increase in the automobile industry was reflected in a number of factories producing tires, wheels and accessories.

Death Wins as Plane Brings Cortin Too Late

Rock Island, Ill., Jan. 26. (A.P.).—Death won today in a race with the air mail bringing a precious quantity of Cortin to fight off an attack of Addison's disease suffered by Dr. E. Franc Morrill, 65. Supreme medical director of the Royal Neighbors of America. She died just before a supply of the newly discovered preparation arrived from New York. Funeral arrangements were delayed pending arrival of relatives.

Dr. Morrill spent several years in the mountainous regions of North Carolina and the mining counties of West Virginia after becoming associated with the Royal Neighbors. Physicians believed her final illness had a contributory cause in the hardships she endured in that period.

Argentina Plans Elected Governors.

Buenos Aires, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—The government prepared a decree today to convoke the electoral colleges on February 5 and outlining arrangements for elected provincial governors to replace, on February 17, the interventors, appointed by the provisional government, who have governed twelve of Argentina's fourteen states since the revolution of 1930.

NAVAL GROUP VOTES TO EXAMINE AKRON

To Study Sabotage Reports, Despite Defense of Ship by Admiral Moffett.

(Associated Press.)

An examination of the Akron—the world's largest airship—to determine if she is worthy of her title, "Queen of the Skies," was decided upon yesterday by the House naval committee.

Despite testimony by Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics, that she is the "best airship ever constructed," the committee agreed:

To study the Justice Department's file pertaining to the sabotage of which Paul F. Kassay, a Hungarian, was accused while the vessel was under construction; and

To scrutinize materials used in the airship which the Machinists' Union once said were defective.

Moffett Prises Ship.

While the committee was doing these things, however, Admiral Moffett, as the first witness in the investigation of reported defects in the ship, held the facts that she was 19,000 pounds overweight and 3 knots slower than specifications do not materially affect the performance of the ship or her radius of action.

He insisted too that "some psychological something" is responsible for criticism of the vessel, which he said is "airworthy" in all respects.

"I think it of the greatest importance that these rumors and this gossip be set at rest," he told the committee. "I am astonished at apparently what is a general impression through the country that she's a failure."

Kassay Case Discussed.

Questioned by Representative McClintic (Democrat), Oklahoma, sponsor of the investigation, the admiral said he and the Navy had been amply satisfied after thorough investigations that there had been no sabotage and that no inferior materials or workmanship had gone into the craft.

A subcommittee headed by McClintic was appointed by Chairman Vinson to study the Justice Department's handling of the Kassay case. Kassay, who worked as a riveter on the Akron, was discharged, but not prosecuted.

Moffett also was asked to bring to the committee today, if he could find them, samples of defective materials which union machinists said had been used.

Admiral Moffett revealed that the Navy contemplated adding 1,000,000 cubic feet to the size of the ZRS-5, sister ship to the Akron.

Board Recommended Increase.

"The inspection board made a recommendation to that effect, but because of the general effort to economize we thought it hardly desirable to bring that up in Congress at this time," he testified.

"I wouldn't let that hold me back," Representative Britten (Republican), Illinois, interposed. "Let the committee have the benefit of your recommendation, anyhow, and I don't think Congress would be inclined to turn down $200,000 or $300,000 more just for the sake of economy when that money would give us a much better ship."

Moffett said the Navy wanted to make the second ship larger to increase her cruising radius and efficiency and to keep in the United States the "honor of having the largest airship in the world." The German Zeppelin Co., he said he understood, is building a vessel that will be slightly larger than the Akron.

Pay Discrimination By U. S. Is Assailed

Comptroller McCarl Says Prevailing Wage Rates Should Be Met.

(Associated Press.)

Comptroller General McCarl told the House labor committee yesterday he saw no reason why the Government itself should not pay the "prevailing wage rate" it requires of private contractors.

"Speaking as a private citizen," Mr. McCarl said, "I do not see why the Government should require something of me it would not do itself."

Proposals are before the committee to tighten the Bacon-Davis law requiring contractors on Federal buildings to pay the wage rates prevailing in a community.

Just before Mr. McCarl testified, Representative LaGuardia (Republican), New York, contended that where the Government did its own construction work it should pay the prevailing wage.

MRS. JUDD IN FIERY ATTACK ON SHERIFF

Charges Witnesses Are Told What to Say; State Closes Its Case.

Courthouse, Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Winnie Ruth Judd accompanied the opening of her insanity-self-defense plea by a startling outburst against Sheriff J. R. McFadden, today after the State had advanced jealousy as the motive for the confessed slaying of her two women friends.

"You're trying to hang me. You've been telling witnesses what to say about me," the defendant screamed at Sheriff McFadden.

The scene occurred in a corridor where Mrs. Judd rushed during a brief recess in the trunk murder trial after her aged mother had taken the witness stand. She was quieted and returned to the courtroom.

The State, closing its case on the note of jealousy, placed in the court record by the testimony of its last two witnesses the name of J. J. Halloran, wealthy Phoenix sportsman and lumber dealer, as the man connected with the slim defendant's alleged deadly emotional flare-up.

Lucille Moore, nurse friend of Mrs. Judd, testified the bobbed-haired defendant confided to her, 24 hours before the State charged the two women friends were slain, that she had left the home of Agnes Anne Leroi and Hedvig Samuelson, "because of Jack Halloran."

Mrs. Judd is on trial for slaying of Mrs. Leroi. A second murder information is on file against her for the death of Miss Samuelson. Mrs. Judd formerly lived with the two women but moved to an apartment of her own in another part of the city several weeks before the slayings.

Miss Moore Wins Confidence.

Mrs. Judd's confidence, Miss Moore said, was given her as they sat in an automobile in front of the apartment of Mrs. Leroi and Miss Samuelson, while Halloran went inside alone.

While he was gone, said the witness, Mrs. Judd remarked of him, "I think he is perfectly grand."

She had, Miss Moore said, made Halloran promise "not to let Anne know I'm out here," but Mrs. Leroi did know, and Mrs. Judd was upset about it.

A surprise witness, Mrs. A. R. Lepker, testified Mrs. Judd told her of "her boy friend, whose name was Jack," and declared "Sammy and Jack made her so mad sometimes she thought she would go crazy."

Jealousy Theory Parried.

Combining their indicated pleas of self-defense and insanity, Paul Schenck, and Herman Lewkowitz, of Mrs. Judd's counsel, parried the State's jealousy theory upon which County Attorney Lloyd Andrews had rested, with testimony from a rapid succession of witnesses leading up to Mrs. H. J. McKinnell, the accused woman's mother.

Mrs. Ernest A. Smith, associate of both Mrs. Leroi and Mrs. Judd at the clinic where they were employed, and other clinic employes spent brief sessions in the witness chair to testify the two women "were always together," that they went out to lunch together at noon October 16, a few hours before the purported time of the slayings, and that Mrs. Judd's left hand was bandaged when she reported for work at the clinic October 17.

Conversations of Mrs. Judd about "my baby" and "my little boy" were told by witnesses, who said she displayed a picture of a youngster 20 months old, "who is with my parents."

Mother Calmly Testifies.

Mrs. Judd, the mother said, as she sat calm and dry-eyed, had from the age of 7 years displayed a mother complex.

"I found Ruth making little clothes—baby clothes," she said. "That was when she was 16."

Mother and daughter sat in the crowded court less than a dozen feet apart. Mrs. McKinnell kept her eyes ahead.

Mrs. McKinnell testified Mrs. Judd had never had a child nor adopted a child.

The aged woman's voice trembling and eyes welling with tears as she was led into details appartnely close to her heart, gave her testimony to corroborate the defense contention Mrs. Judd's conversations regarding "my baby" and "my little boy" were hallucinations on her part.

"In your knowledge," she was asked, "has your daughter ever had a child or adopted a child?"

"No, I don't know of any such thing."

Marie Prevost and Leila Hyams Are Ill

Rain Ends Frost Threat To Fruit in California

Los Angeles, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Fear of southern California horticulturists that recent frost damage might continue was relieved tonight by a forecast of rain for tomorrow. It was stated that the expected showers, coming from the North and extending probably to the Mexican border, meant the end of immediate danger to citrus and vegetable crops, which suffered in frosts Sunday night and last night.

State and county experts said damage to citrus crops probably would be "considerable," but that an accurate estimate would be impossible for several days.

INDIAN REVOLT AIMS AT THRONE OF HINDU

Fourteen Villages Sacked by 12,000 Moslems in Drive Against Ruler.

Spinigar, India, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—The Maharajah of Kashmir, once known as the mysterious "Mr. A." of blackmail fame, was again threatened tonight with the loss of his throne.

Twelve thousand fanatical Moslems, strongly armed, were reported to be streaming north out of the Punjab with the intention of launching a concentrated attack on this capital and gaining control of the only predominantly Mohammedan state in India ruled by a Hindu.

The Maharajah, whose proper name is Sir Hari Singh, has appealed for protection and British and native troops were being hurried across mountain passes to save his "paradise on earth" from the designs of most of its own people.

Residents Terrorized.

Fourteen villages in the Reasi district, near the Punjab border, already have been sacked by the rebels, and their inhabitants—mostly Hindu—have been terrorized. Many buildings have been burned to the ground and the situation was said to be grave.

Severe fighting between Hindus and Moslems has complicated the issue and once more thrown the spotlight on the communal issue, which has inflamed the Indian people for years and was principally responsible for the failure of the second round-table conference.

Sir Hari has ruled since 1925 over one of the richest provinces in India,—a territory the size of Minnesota and having a population as large as Chicago.

Oppose Hindu Preference.

The people are 95 per cent Mohammedan and have repeatedly rebelled at what they claimed was preference shown to Hindus in the allotment of government jobs.

The name of "Mr. A." echoed around the world in 1924 when he became the central figure in a blackmail case in London involving $1,500,000. The Midland Bank as his representative was sued for damages and Joseph Robinson, a bookmaker, and his wife, were tried for blackmail.

The jury acquitted Mr. and Mrs. Robinson of attempting to extort money from Sir Hari, but failed to agree on the bank's liability. The prince's real name was not revealed until after the trial for "reasons of state."

Wilhelm, in Mourning, To SpendQuiet Birthday

Doorn, Holland, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Bowed down by grief over the death of his favorite sister, Sophie, the former Queen of Greece, Wilhelm II., once the German emperor, will celebrate his seventy-third birthday tomorrow in the seclusion of his Holland estate.

The usual festivities attending the occasion have been called off, but the servants and other personnel will receive their usual free day and will be treated to a special noonday dinner in the administration building. The fact that the former emperor has recovered from his recent attack of bronchitis is evident as he will be able to take his usual morning stroll through the park-like estate.

County Agent and Aids Indicted in Seed Frauds

Dothan, Ala., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—J. H. Witherington, county farm demonstration agent, and two other persons weer indicted today by a Federal grand jury on charges of conspiring to defraud the Government in connection with seed loans.

Charles C. McArthur and his son, Willis P. McArthur, of Ashford, were the others indicted. Each was placed under bond of $5,000 and ordered to appear in court March 7. Several other indictments were reported to have been returned by the grand jury, but arrests have not been made.

U. S. BUREAUS URGED TO BUY HOME GOODS

Hoover Suggests Movement to Congress as Means for Aiding Trade.

(Associated Press.)

Congress poised last night for a new relief drive after turning over to the Emergency Reconstruction Finance Corporation its $500,000,000 of working capital.

Aid to depositors of closed banks is the next point in the bipartisan program, but Senator La Follette (Republican), Wisconsin, was ready to seek action today on his administration-opposed bill to provide $375,000,000 for direct Federal relief to the unemployed.

Two banking subcommittees were in a veritable race to get before the Senate companion measures intended to unlock the vaults of closed banks to destitute depositors. One or both of the bills will be up for consideration before the end of the week.

Both Houses Approve.

Final approval of the $500,000,000 Treasury investment in the reconstruction corporation was given yesterday in both branches to a report reconciling the different provisions of the Senate and House.

As a part of the program the President outlined neared completion, he came forward with a new proposal for legislation to help business.

He recommended to Congress that all Government departments be authorized to give preference to domestic products in purchasing supplies and equipment. In a letter to Speaker Garner, the Chief Executive urged laws which would permit Federal bureaus to buy American products even though the price of similar foreign-made articles should be lower. The letter was presented to the House and was referred to the expenditures committee.

Foreign Bids Cited.

Earlier, Mr. Hoover had announced he would make the recommendations and mentioned low bids from foreign sources to supply Government equipment.

He said it was his understanding that these were made possible because of the abandonment by some governments abroad of the gold standard.

Today the Senate banking committee will consider the three men selected by President Hoover to help run the Reconstruction Corporation—Charles G. Dawes, Harvey C. Couch, of Arkansas, and Jesse Jones, of Texas.

Confirmation of these men by the Senate within the next two days will permit the corporation to go actively into the business of lending its billions to needy industries and agriculture.

La Follette Bill Studied.

Democrats, who are still pondering the issue presented by the La Follette-Costigan bill for direct Federal relief, are ready to ask that this question go over until next Monday. La Follette previously gave notice he would call up the bill today.

The Senate banking subcommittee, headed by Senator Goldsborough (Republican), Maryland, considering the administration's measure to establish a $750,000,000 corporation to speed relief for depositors, is expected to make a final report today.

Meanwhile, Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, who is sponsoring a general banking revision measure, also including provision for aid to depositors of closed banks, is ready to ask for action on his bill.

Separate Bill Favored.

There is a disposition on the part of the administration to seek to incorporate the bank depositors' relief in a separate bill, fearing lengthy discussion over the more comprehensive banking revision measure of Mr. Glass.

The campaign for the Hoover-sponsored home loan discounting system was renewed during the day before the Senate banking subcommittee headed by Senator Watson (Republican), Indiana.

A dramatic plea for the measure was made by L. T. Stevenson, of Pittsburgh, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

Citing a gain in foreclosures on home mortgages, he said:

"For God's sake give us quick action and save this man out on the limb."

Predictions are freely made, however, that with enactment of legislation to help bank depositors, the end of the emergency program urged by Mr. Hoover will be reached.

Kidnaping of Youth Doubted by Sheriff

Story of Ice Man's Son Is Called Inconsistent; Threats Scouted.

McHenry, Ill., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Sheriff Lester Edinger said tonight he regarded with "considerable doubt" the tale of Alvin Bauer, 19-year-old son of a McHenry ice dealer, that he had been kidnaped and threatened with being roasted alive by a group of unidentified men unless he revealed places selling beer in McHenry County.

The sheriff said several points in the youth's story were inconsistent. Bauer said five kidnapers seized him and forced him to drive in his ice truck to an isolated place in the woods late Monday. There, he said, he was questioned concerning the selling of beer.

When he persisted that he did not know what places sold beer, Bauer said, the abductors set a large bonfire and held him over it as the flames licked upward, igniting his sweater. When he was taken from the fire, he continued, he made a break for freedom and escaped into the surrounding woods.

Senator Davis to Take Wet Stand, Report Says

Philadelphia, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—The Philadelphia Record says Senator James J. Davis will issue a statement within a few days declaring himself against the prohibition laws and calling for a referendum on repeal or modification of the Volstead act.

As the result of his stand, the Record says, the Republican State organization will support Mr. Davis for renomination. Congressman James M. Beck, of Philadelphia, and State Senator John L. McClure, of Delaware County, both of whom have been mentioned as possible successors to Davis, the Record says, will step aside.

JURORS IN HONOLULU INDICT 4 AMERICANS

therefor, I present to you the question of anarchy in the community.

"Are you willing to take the responsibility for that situation?".

Resumption of grand jury sessions today after Judge Cristy had delivered further admonitions and instructions resulted in the return of the indictment.

As the grand jury deliberated, attorneys for the defendants waived preliminary hearing in district court. Griffith Wight, deputy city and county attorney, objected to the procedure, but was overruled.

At the same time Mrs. Shizuko Yamamoto, a Japanese living adjacent to the Fortescue home, where the slaying is supposed to have occurred, reported to the city and county attorney's office that on the day of the killing she had seen Mrs. Fortescue seated in a sedan in the Fortescue garage and that Mrs. Fortescue had drawn the blinds.

On two occasions thereafter, Mrs. Yamamoto said, a man came out of the house. The Japanese woman said this occurred about 9:30 a. m., fixed by the prosecution as the time Mrs. Fortescue, Massie and Lord left the house with Kahahawai's body.

In further addressing the inquisitorial body this morning prior to the returning of the indictment, Judge Cristy said:

"Incidents occurring outside the grand jury room before your consideration of the present case began, indicate the possibility that one or more of you entered the session with minds so fixed and determined on personal views of law and fact that you prepared to prevent any indictment in the matter pending so far as you were able, notwithstanding what the evidence might be and notwithstanding what the court should advise the jury that the law might be.

"I ask you gentlemen to lay aside all race prejudice and rise above personal trivial considerations and apply yourself to the question whether the Government shall exist, and how."

No Renewal of Feeling.

City officials said there had been no rioting or renewal of race feeling as the result of a fight Sunday involving an Army lieutenant and a civilian.

Early Williams, part Hawaiian real estate broker, and his wife filed assault and battery charges against Lieut. Charles A. Lynch, of the Army, and his brother, Howard Lynch.

Williams said the brothers, en route to Manila, were guests in his home, having been accompanied by Sadie Smythe. Williams said Miss Smythe told him one of the brothers had choked her. The real estate man said he asked the brothers to apologize or leave and that they attacked him with a cocktail shaker, knocking him unconscious.

Last night, Roy Craw, a nephew of Williams, seeking to avenge his uncle, failed in an attempt to attack the Lynch brothers.

Despite the request of Wight for indictments charging abduction and first degree murder, the grand jury voted the lesser murder charge and returned no kidnaping accusation.

Under territorial law the maximum penalty for second degree murder is twenty years to life imprisonment at hard labor.

WOODCOCK MAKES PERSONNEL SHIFTS

Acts "For Good of Service;" Jefferson Davis Gets New York Post.

(Associated Press.)

Jefferson Davis, second cousin of the Confederate President and prohibition administrator in eastern Missouri, was selected yesterday to take charge of Federal enforcement in the northern district of New York.

The transfer was one of half a dozen shifts announced by Prohibition Director Woodcock, who said they were "for the good of the service."

Those affected will assume new duties Monday. They are, in addition to Davis:

Lowell Smith, deputy administrator for northern New York, to the same office in Maryland, filling a vacancy.

Charles P. Britt, deputy administrator at Indianapolis, to be special agent in New Orleans.

John W. Morrill, deputy administrator for Rhode Island, to replace Britt at Indianapolis.

Hobard D. Brink, agent-in-charge in Maryland, to replace Morrill for Rhode Island.

James Dillon, agent-in-charge in eastern Missouri, to be acting deputy administrator in Davis' place.

Statement Is Issued.

The National Prohibition Board of Strategy yesterday issued the following statement:

"Making the Constitution impotent by refusing appropriations to enforce prohibition, as proposed by Representative James M. Beck, of Pennsylvania, in a radio address January 25, is a revolutionary doctrine which we do not believe the responsible type of men and women who make up this Congress, or who make up any future Congress, will ever indorse.

"Nor do we believe that any President, or any man who can be elected President, ever would tolerate such nullification of the Constitution.

Attacks His Theory.

"Mr. Beck's theory could be applied to any Federal law to which any serious objection is raised, and if a precedent were established of killing prohibition by such a method there would be an end to constitutional government.

"Mr. Beck is enthusiastically described by his wet associates as 'a great constitutional lawyer.' We confidently believe that neither the Congress nor the country will follow a leadership that proposes to 'scrap' an integral part of the Federal Constitution because elements in our national citizenship who fought its adoption object to its enforcement."

BERTRAND H. SNELL.

REPRESENTATIVE BERTRAND H. SNELL, of New York, Republican leader of the House, has the confidence of the newspaper reporters who comprise the press gallery.

Whether he had or had not that confidence might not add or detract from his stature as a national figure, but the characteristics which have sired it give a summary of the man. He is frank, forthright, pugnacious, to the point; he is a human sun-dial of House sentiment; not that he tells everything he knows or answers every question, for he doesn't, but what he tells can be relied on as accurate.

If things go on as they are at present, a new Damon and Pythias tradiation will grow up in the House. Mr. Snell has taken the idea of cooperation between his party and the ruling Democrats as something to be expressed in action rather than in words and he probably spends more time with Speaker John N. Garner than with any other man in the House.

The power of oratory Representative Snell leaves to others, but he is no person to be hopped on lightly by his opponents in a verbal duel; he has something of the style of Speaker Garner when the latter was Democratic floor leader, and, it is said, the two get a laugh now and then, in the privacy of the Speaker's private office, over this or that jab by the Republican leader at the Democrats. He spends not much time on the floor but more in his office to which repair the Republicans to talk to him. When he is on the floor he often is on the Democratic side in converse with a group of his political opponents.

His attire never is in disarray. His clothes obviously were made for him only. He likes brown suits, but he wears other colors; he dresses so that he looks well kept, as if he had taken pains with his attire, but after leaving him it would be impossible to say more than that.

He is a wealthy man and is secretly proud that he is, because he believes that indicates his ability—and, too, he likes the nice things of life—but he deprecates talk of his wealth.

"I've done more hard, physical work with my hands and my body probably than any other man in this House," he says. "And," he adds, after a contemplative moment, "I could do it over again, too!"

Of medium stature, of settled figure, his gray hair thinning on top of his head, the New Yorker has that air of authority which would immediately identify him as the owner if he walked through the aisles of a great department store—if he owned a department store.

Born in Colton, N. Y., on December 9, 1870, he helped educate himself by working between times, has been clerk, and many other things, is a manufacturer with interests in various things from pumps to butter and cheese, has his fingers in running banks, colleges, political committees, and other institutions.

When he came to Washington as a member of the Sixty-fourth Congress, he picked out an apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street northwest. He never has moved. He is married. He has two daughters.

WILBUR VIGOROUSLY RAPS INTERIOR CUTS

Says Proposed Reductions by House Body Would "Stall Machinery."

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Wilbur began a vigorous fight yesterday against extensive slashes in the Interior Department budget on the grounds that necessary departmental services were seriously threatened.

If the department's appropriations are allowed to stand as reported out from the House appropriations committee, he said, the machinery of his organization "would be stalled."

He plans to make his fight against the cut of more than $6,000,000 below the Budget Bureau's estimates when the bill reaches the Senate.

"If the cuts outlined are approved," he said, "the department can not render the service expected, and it merely will mean the continuation of overhead expenses without any results."

He described the proposed cut in the Boulder Dam appropriation as "taking advantage of a time element."

"We are obligated to push the work at Boulder Dam as fast as possible for simple economic reasons," he said. "The sooner it can be finished the sooner we will begin to draw interest on the investment. Trimming off $2,000,000 in the regular bill and having to appropriate it in a deficiency bill is not economy."

Dr. Wilbur said he was in complete sympathy with the intentions of Congress to "follow out President Hoover's recommendations for economy," but that he did not feel "necessary service of the Government to the people should be hampered." He added: "What the House committee has asked us to do is to hang our clothes on a hickory limb but not to go near the water."

In the meantime Elwood Mead, chief of the Bureau of Reclamation, said records of speed were being set at Boulder Dam and that they should not be halted by lack of money.

He said the contractors' bills at the dam this month would total approximately $3,750,000. At this rate he estimated the $8,000,000 appropriation contained in the House committee's recommendation would not last three months.

"The work at Boulder Dam," he said, "is six months ahead of schedule, and our appropriations must be made on that basis unless we wish to run into entirely unnecessary complications."

Dr. Wilbur said the budget for Howard University, Negro school, had been cut $535,000.

"This is trimming off exactly 33 per cent," he added. "The cuts include, among others, a $25,000 reduction in salaries."

Salesman Huey Serves Long-Felt Senate Need

By JOHN J. DALY

SALESMANSHIP sails into the Senate, with Huey Long carrying the banner of American business into the realm of statesmanship—and Tradition takes a nose dive off the dome of the Capitol.

For years, America has led the way in salesmanship, but this is the first instance of a real salesman making his approach to Congress.

The induction of the breezy political leader of Louisiana into the hallowed halls of the Websters, the Calhouns, the Douglasses and the Smoots was a spectacle inspiring and firing the imagination of all America.

Huey Long came in smoking a cigar!

All that was needed to complete the picture was a quartet in the gallery singing the old song,

"'Twas off the Blue Canary Isles,
One glorious summer day,
I sat upon the quarter deck
And puffed my cares away."

* * * *

IN one fell swoop, two ancient and honorable customs of an august deliberative body staggered and swooned by the wayside. Huey Long flicked cigar ashes all over the carpeted floor, and failed to have his colleague, Senator Broussard, escort him to the vice presidential rostrum.

A new order had descended upon the Senate, represented by the scion of salesmanship.

"It won't be long now," Senator Long said afterward, "until Broussard retires."

As the new order calls for no retiring men in the Senate, unless they retire gracefully, another senator was pressed into service for the Long ceremonies, which turned out to be very short and snappy, in keeping with the slogan of salesmanship: "Be brief and always leave 'em laughing when you say good-by."

* * * *

THE entire proceedings, as a matter of fact, were useless. Huey Long needed no introduction to the Vice President or to anybody else.

The new arrival brings to the staid old United States Senate something it has been standing in need of for a long, long time—new blood, young blood, full of pep and personality. Long fills a long-felt want.

Hereafter high-powered pressure, snappy sales talks, will undoubtedly be brought to bear in pacing senatorial prestige before the country.

Publicity, advertising and a slogan—like "Say It With Flowers"—these are what the Senate needs. They can all be supplied by a 38-year-old Senate salesman whose reputation is that he could sell sand to the natives of the Sahara Desert.

Hooey is what they call it in salesmanship, but who cares, so long as Huey sells the Senate in a big way?

Watch his smoke!

Man Seized in Chase On Charge of Robbery

Arrested by police after he had been pursued from the Washington Loan & Trust Co. office building for several blocks, Clifton A. Hall, colored, yesterday demanded a jury trial when he was arraigned in Police Court on a charge of attempted petty larceny.

Police were set upon Hall's trail by Miss Eleanor Herzog, who is employed in the office from which Hall is alleged to have attempted to steal a purse. Miss Herzog saw an intruder open a desk, and she raised the alarm that brought police. Hall was released in $500 bail.

Capt. Plemmons Leaves Police Force for Age

Capt. Caney L. Plemmons was retired from the Metropolitan Police Department yesterday by the District Commissioners because he had reached the age limit of 64 years.

He had served 39 years in the department and was granted a pension of $150 a month.

Needy Man Home After Police "Lift"

Trip Is Provided When Story of Ill Luck Is Verified.

Unable to procure aid from any other source, E. G. Mathena, a former postoffice employe of New York City, is back at his home there, thanks to the aid given by E. A. Horsley, a policeman.

Mathena told his story of being penniless and unable to find work and the policeman, after checking the story for its accuracy, arranged with a bus company to give the man transportation to New York City.

GIVE MORE

By Dr. HERBERT C. HOPKINS, President District of Columbia Dental Society.

The alleviation of mental and physical suffering by funds given through the Community Chest to the unfortunate men and women in Washington is the foremost project of the community, according to my opinion of the Chest, which is now in the midst of its drive for $2,601,000.

The economic situation which is prevalent here as well as throughout the country is responsible for the increased suffering which has taxed the capacity of every welfare agency in the Chest for the last few months. Hospitals are finding more people unable to pay for their services. Orphan asylums find parents and guardians less able to pay for care of children. Organizations dealing with mental disabilities find their problems heavier because of the distraction of unemployed people, desperate from worry.

An estimate of one-third greater need this year than in 1931 for the relief program of our city is moderate in view of the circumstances. And citizens of Washington, all aware of the increasing need, realize why they are asked to give more this year than ever before and will do their part to push the drive over its goal.

CHEST IS $56,742 NEARER ITS GOAL IN 1932 CAMPAIGN

found that I had $1,800 for the day nursery, enough to start.

"You are going to get more out of this drive than you put into it," the speaker continued, "because it brings out the best in us, a consummation devoutly to be desired today. In my city there is a great deal more of unemployment than in Washington This city is favored because of its Government pay roll. In every other city people are feeling poverty as never before. In the greatest country in the world people are going hungry. There is talk of communism, but I tell you that there is no fear of communism. Give every person a job and the right to live and talk of communism and other 'isms' will disappear.

"If no other people in Washington take part in this drive, I am sure that you who sit before me will put it over. You must. The eyes of the country are upon the Capital City, of the Nation, to see what it will do to relieve distress and suffering."

Mrs. Norton left early to return to the Capitol where, she said, there was talk of a vote on the Agriculture bill.

"Not that I have any interest in agriculture," she said, "but there is a chance of a rider, decreasing the pay of Government employes, and we are determined that this shall not happen in this country."

Mrs. Charles A. Goldsmith made a short talk, predicting success in the campaign and citing statistics from the United Hebrew Relief Society, of which she is president, to show the increased needs existing at present.

Chairman Colladay made an inspirational talk, calling on every worker to do his duty in order to end the campaign on time.

Elwood Street made announcements, stating that Boss & Phelps, Call Carl, Inc., and D. J. Kaufman, Inc., had reported 100 per cent gifts to date.

The chairman then reported their day's totals.

Col. E. G. Bliss, of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., and Maj. D. J. Donovan, auditor of the District of Columbia, were appointed trustees of the Community Chest from the District of Columbia committee on employment, at a meeting of the steering committee, held yesterday noon in the District Building. E. H. Daniel, vice chairman of the District of Columbia committee on employment, presided.

Letter From Principal.

A delegation from the Bureau of Goodwill Industries, Inc., with headquarters in Boston, presented a plan to the committee whereby a great many unemployed men and women could be put to work reconditioning old garments and other waste material, such as furniture. The committee decided to study the matter.

A letter was presented from Miss Maude E. Aiton, principal of Webster School, stating that through a special committee it was now possible to offer various educational opportunities to the unemployed without charge.

U. S. STEEL DIVIDEND PAID FROM SURPLUS

Directors Decide Future Is More Promising; Declare 50-Cent Payment.

New York, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Directors of the United States Steel Corporation, chairmaned by J. P. Morgan, looked back over 1931, then forward into 1932 today, and decided that the future was hopeful enough to justify dipping into surplus to the extent of $10,656,616 to maintain dividend disbursements.

This world's largest steel maker ran far into the red in the final months of 1931, but directors ordered a disbursement of 50 cents a share on the common stock, as reduced from the $1 payments in the two previous quarters. The regular quarterly payment of $1.75 per share of preferred stock was directed.

The books showed a deficit of $4,376,798 for the last quarter of the year, which was met from surplus, along with the dividend payments, making a reduction from surplus of $15,033,414, the largest for any quarter in the corporation's history.

Myron C. Taylor issued a statement as chairman of the finance committee serving warning that "continuance of dividends on the common stock must depend upon an improvement in the corporation's volume of business and earnings."

Huge Deficit Shown.

While the annual statement of the corporation has not been issued, annual figures compiled from the quarterly statements indicated that the maintenance of dividends for 1931 piled up a deficit of $49,236,882, as against a surplus of $18,836,097 after dividend payments for 1930.

The corporation's ability to maintain disbursements to stockholders reflects the huge cash reserves which it has been able to pile up as a result of conservative dividend payments in its boom years. At the end of 1930, the corporation reported cash or equivalent exceeding $197,000,000, so a deficit of nearly $50,000,000 for 1931 should leave the cash item well above the $100,000,000 minimum, which the management is understood to believe it should maintain. What the actual cash item was at the close of 1931, however, will not be known until the annual statement is published.

Total earnings after expenses and taxes for 1931 of $46,434,371 were less than the charge offs for depreciation, depletion, &c., which amount to $47,317,895. Interest payments on bonds of the parent corporation and subsidiaries left a net loss from operations of $6,353,148.

Had Nonoperating Income.

However, the company had special nonoperating income of $19,319,893, largely representing a profit on the sale of the Gary Heat, Light & Water Co., so before dividends, there was a net profit of $12,966,845. After preferred dividends of $25,219,677, and common dividends of $36,983,950, the deficit of $49,236,882 remained to be charged to surplus.

The full year's income amounted to $3.60 per share of preferred stock, on which $7 in dividends was paid. After payment of preferred dividends in 1930 there remained $7.86 per common share.

The deficit of $4,997,961 for the final quarter of the year, before dividend deductions, was after a credit of special nonoperating income. Before this credit, the deficit, from operations, was $8,017,270. This compared with net income, including nonoperating, of $12,366,088 in the last quarter of last year, and net of $3,187,131 in the preceding quarter of 1931.

The corporation announced that a new position, vice chairman of the financial committee, had been created, and no announcement was made of a successor to James A. Farrell, who retires as president on April 18.

San Francisco, Jan. 26. (A.P.).—United States Steel common stock sold down more than $2.50 below the Wall Street close on the market here and then recovered nearly $1 today, following the slashing of the dividend in half. The closing sale was at $40—down $1.75 from the last sale in New York.

U. S. AGAIN ATTACKS INFLATION OF MONEY

fiscal agents estimate, something more than $1,200,000,000 in currency is sterilized by individual hoarding. These abnormal withdrawals have forced many banks to a correspondingly abnormal state of quick liquidity; and this, in turn, has produced a sharp and unwarranted contraction of commercial credits. The result has been a wholly unnecessary check upon industrial and commercial activity and a disastrous forced liquidation of securities.

When the emergency credit agency has broken through this vicious circle of depression psychosis its work will be done. It approaches the problem, not through inflation, but merely by seeking to aid established financial institutions in maintaining their normal volumes of credit. As the hoarding community tires of the depression and puts its money back to work in the usual channels, the Government credits will be repaid.

Although this policy has been outlined repeatedly by Government spokesmen on Capitol Hill, certain sections of European opinion cling doggedly to the rumor that the United States is embracing a thinly guised inflation. In taking official note of the European misunderstanding, however, the administration has carefully avoided any intimation that it may be politically inspired.

Further Obstruction.

Further congressional obstruction to the launching of the reconstruction corporation developed yesterday in both the House and Senate. The House declined to accept a minor Senate amendment to the $500,000,000 appropriation bill providing the initial capital, and the measure went to conference. Meanwhile, the Senate banking committee was unable to take up the nominations for the directorate. The matter went over a day.

It is still possible, however, for Congress to set the corporation's wheels in motion before the end of the week, if it can bring about final action on both the appropriation bill and the nominations.

Employes Hear Health Talk.

Dr. Margaret Nicholson, of the Children's Hospital staff and chief pediatrician at Providence Hospital, gave a practical health talk to employes of the Goldenberg department store yesterday morning. Dr. Nicholson's address is one of the series sponsored by the Tuberculosis Association in its campaign of education for adult workers. It included many definite suggestions as to rest, diet, exercise and breathing fresh air.

MAGNATE DEAD

WILLIAM WRIGLEY, JR.

WRIGLEY DIES AT 70 AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Chewing Gum Magnate and Sportsman Had Suffered Heart Ailment.

Chicago, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—William Wrigley, jr., Chicago capitalist and sportsman, died early today in his winter home at Phoenix, Ariz., and the world lost its czar of chewing gum. He was 70 years old.

On his penny sticks of confection, Mr. Wrigley, with his novel advertising built a fortune estimated by associates at around $150,000,000.

Mr. Wrigley's illness had been known here for several weeks. He had long been a sufferer from acute indigestion. This affected his heart and brought death by paralysis.

Baseball, coal mining, transportation, the motion-picture industry, ranching and hotels were numbered among the enterprises developed by Mr. Wrigley in his allotted three score and ten.

Owned Chicago Cubs.

His hobby—baseball—was in itself one of the biggest of businesses. After buying the Chicago Cubs of the National League in 1924, Mr. Wrigley spent more than $6,000,000 in strengtheing the team, yet he was never to realize his dream—a world's series championship pennant flying in his Cubs' park.

Just north of the Boulevard Bridge stands Mr. Wrigley's own monument, an elaborate edifice of white terra cotta that bears his name and houses his business offices. It stands, too, as his prophecy of Chicago's business growth—for it was the first large office structure built north of the Chicago River outside the loop.

Used Advertising Widely.

Few businesses used advertising as widely as did Mr. Wrigley.

The arrow-headed elves adorning his gum packages were known the world over. Approximately $100,000,000 was spent by Mr. Wrigley up to 1931 for advertising his wares.

Wrigley once told his son, "No matter what the condition of business, never stop advertising."

Three years ago, the capitalist interested himself in the resort qualities of Arizona. He operated the Arizona Biltmore and owned a 40-room home near Phoenix.

Burial on Island.

In this home he died. His widow, the son and Mrs. James R. Offield, only daughter, were with him.

Friends late today learned Wrigley would probably be buried on Catalina Island, the sort of barony which he bought thirteen years ago. There the Cubs trained and golfers played over private links.

As messages of condolence poured in today from all sections of the world, there was little or no doubt but that his only son, Philip K. Wrigley, would succeed him as controlling shareholder of the Cubs. Young Wrigley, despite his many business enterprises, has held the same keen interest in the game as his father. He said today that none of the Wrigley stock owned by his father will be sold for inheritance tax or any other purpose. Ample provisions have been made to take care of all estate and Federal expenditures.

Guard Is Suspended In Panella's Escape

Richmond, Va., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Charles Panella, whose spectacular escape from the penitentiary at noon Monday resulted in a thorough police search in Richmond and throughout the State, was still at large tonight.

The prison guard, whose relaxed vigilance paved the way for Panella's escape, has been suspended for 30 days. Panella, who was serving a 58-year term for a series of highway robberies in Newport News, Warwick County and Richmond, was only recently committed to the State Penitentiary.

Assault Case Evidence Is Ordered Stricken Out

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Judge Frank P. Christian tonight sustained a motion by John Easley, defense attorney, to strike out as insufficient and inadequate all the evidence introduced today in the case of T. J. Hamelton, Negro "psychologist," who had been indicted on charges of criminal attack on two white girls.

The trial was held with the public excluded from the courtroom.

CRIME BUREAU AID IS COMMISSION AIM

Improvement of Equipment in Montgomery Unit Is Undertaken.

Improvement of equipment of the Identification Bureau of Montgomery County Police Department is being undertaken by the Montgomery County Commissioners. Commissioners Robert D. Hagner and W. Frank Ricketts were appointed a committee to decide on what additional equipment should be purchased to make the bureau as efficient as possible.

Detective Theodore Voliten is in charge of the bureau. The record for convictions won by State's Attorney Stedman Prescott at the last session of court was held to be due in part this ability to produce actual photographs of the scenes of crimes and accidents so that the jury could visualize what had happened. The photographs were prepared by the identification bureau, which also has aided police of other nearby counties in capturing criminals.

The county commissioners announced that a tentative offer has been received for the purchase of $520,000 of the $1,000,000 bond issue which has been authorized for schools and roads this year but was withdrawn because of the condition of the bond market. The commissioners denied the petition of R. B. Blundon for reclassification of 2.2 acres of land at Linden, Md., from residential to commercial and approved payment of a bill for $693.50 presented by Georgetown Hospital for treatment of indigent sick. The bill was forwarded to the State comptroller for payment.

BAKER'S NEW LEAGUE AID 1932 CHANCES

generally agreed that Mr. Baker had definitely killed any chance he might have had for the nomination.

However, in his statement of yesterday, issued just before he and Mrs. Baker sailed for Mexico for a rest, the diminutive former Secretary of War put a somewhat different complexion on the matetr.

"I am not in favor of a plank in the Democratic national platform urging our joining the league," Mr. Baker said. "I think it would be a great mistake to make a partisan issue of the matter.

"I think we shall go into the league some day, and I think we ought to, but I don't think that we should take that action until the people of the United States have had a chance to see the league in action enough to be fully satisfied as to the wisdom of such a course."

The net of this is that Mr. Baker has agreed to soft pedal the league question. He has not agreed to change his own opinion with regard to the league. Mr. Baker is too much of an idealist, too much given to the courage of his convictions to do that, which is one reason why people admire him.

Generally speaking, the Republicans would like to see Mr. Baker made the Democratic nominee this year. His selection, despite the statement he made yesterday, would unquestionably make the League of Nations an issue in the next campaign.

G. O. P. League Stand.

The Republicans have had an anti-League of Nations plank in their platform ever since 1920. If they thought there was any likelihood of Mr. Baker being the nominee this time, they would set that particular plank in bold face type.

In this connection, however, it was pointed out yesterday that President Hoover, as a result of his one-year moratorium and his attitude on debt revision in general, is somewhat vulnerable himself. The Republican attacks made on the President in Congress while the moratorium fight was on would constitute damaging campaign literature.

The sympathetic attitude of Mr. Baker toward the League of Nations is not the only thing his opponents hold against him. There is his labor record, for example. Roosevelt men, like Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, regard Mr. Baker as an ally of the "corporate interests," the "power trust," and therefore an enemy of the "common people."

Out-and-Out Wet.

Mr. Baker is an out-and-out wet, and he made this clear in signing the report of the Wickersham Commission, of which he was a member. Mr. Roosevelt also is a wet, standing for repeal of prohibition. Since the presidential bee bit him, however, he has had but little to say about prohibition.

The result is that Mr. Roosevelt threatens to corral most of the delegates in the dry South and the dry West, a circumstance that fills the more courageous wets in the party with disgust.

Mr. Baker reiterated yesterday that he was not a candidate for the Democratic nomination. To judge from New York dispatches, however, he was not so vehement about it as he has been in the past.

The Ohioan has made not one single move to get the nomination. Instead he has thrown his support behind Gov. George White, who will go to the Chicago convention as the State's favorite son candidate.

There is a distinct understanding, however, that if there should be a deadlock, and if it should appear that Gov. White can not make the grade for the nomination, the State's 55 delegates will get behind Mr. Baker.

Daniels States Roosevelt Can Win Over Democrats

New York, Jan. 26. (A.P.).—Friends of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, another limb on the presidential timber tree, heard with gratification of a statement today by Josephus Daniels, who was Mr. Wilson's Secretary of the Navy. Mr. Daniels told the Atlanta (Georgia) Journal that "the progressives throughout the country, regardless of political affiliation, will vote the Democratic ticket if the party nominates a man whose progressive tendencies are shown by his political record."

"Franklin Roosevelt," Mr. Daniels declared, "is such a man." Meanwhile former Governor Alfred E. Smith, who carried the banner for the party in 1928, and whose unrevealed attitude this year is causing supporters of Mr. Roosevelt and others no end of cogitation, was busily conferring with Robert H. Jackson, of New Hampshire, the new secretary of the Democratic National Committee. Committee business and the general political situation were the topics of their talk, they said.

ITALY AT LAST WINS IN TRIPOLI CONQUEST

Rebellion in North Africa Is Put Down Following 20-Year Fight.

Tripoli, Libya, Africa, Jan. 26. (A.P.).—Over the dead forms of 2,000 rebel tribesmen and after twenty years of incessant warfare, Italy's banners float triumphantly across that "spadeful of sand" in North Africa known as the colonies of Tripoli and Cirenaica.

Marshall Badoglio, Military Governor of Libya, formally reported to the government today that the provinces had been thoroughly pacified and occupied for the first time since Italian troops landed in 1912, when Turkey renounced her rights.

"The rebellion in Cirenaica (and Tripoli) has been completely and definitely quashed," he wrote. "This will point the departure for a more vigorous impulse toward civil progress in the two colonies."

Ends Tragic Epilogue.

Unconsciously, Marshal Badoglio was writing "Finis" to a tragic epilogue which has decimated proud Nomad forces of Omar el Muktar, led to the chieftain's death and cost the lives of hundred of Italian soldiers. Only a handful of these fierce warriors, famished and parched, remain to dispute his words.

The rebellion was really crushed last year when Gen. Graziani stretched 180 miles of barbed wire across the sweeping sands separating Egypt and Libya and blocked off the tribesmen from food and water. After an unsuccessful attempt to pierce the barrier, Usuf Bu Rahil, Omar's chief aid, and his band were pursued into the desert and virtually wiped out.

At the same time, the success of Italian arms again raises the question of the southeast frontier, bitterly disputed with France. Representatives of the two countries probably will discuss it at the world disarmament conference.

Contrasting Claims.

Italy, by virtue of the treaty of London, in 1915, under which she entered the World War, claims that her North African colonies extend as far south as Lake Chad. France, however, has already occupied the territory in the southeast and called it French Equitorial Africa.

Stock raising, silkworm cultivation, salt production, sponge and tunny-fishing, olives, barley, butter and wool; together with a rich future for apricots, figs, almonds, oranges, apples and pears—this is Italy's prospectus for her colonies.

Italy is making a great effort to interest her citizens in the colonies. Emigration is slow but gradual.

LOUISIANA'S CAPITOL IS BESIEGED BY CYR

erful administration and political machine assembled and ruled by Huey Long, now in Washington. The insurgent forces also have the backing of Edwin S. Broussard, senior United States senator from Louisiana, likewise in Washington.

"Capt. Alvin" King, whom Huey Long left in charge of the administration when he departed for Washington Saturday, was the defender. He had the avowed support of most State officers, including the State police. He has made liberal use of the police, posting more than a score of them about the State House and executive mansion as well as his hotel, to prevent seizure.

The guards are all heavily armed and have been ordered to "protect State property at all costs."

Tonight Cyr's forces still refused to disclose what action they planned, to obtain the governor's mansion. It was believed they would seek some sort of court backing, even though the State Supreme Court last week ruled in the Long-Cyr ouster case that it had no jurisdicion over the governorship.

Huey Long's Senate "Rest" Is Short-Lived

(Associated Press.)

To use his own words Huey P. Long came to the Senate for "a rest," but he lost little time getting into action.

Finding a debate to his liking, the new Louisiana senator yesterday, his second in the Senate, engaged the veteran Reed, of Pennsylvania, in a brief exchange over a bill providing for deportation of alien seamen.

He agreed with Reed that steamship lines should not be required to pay expenses of deporting a seaman enlisted in this country and later, upon the return voyage, found to be an illegal entrant.

"To require steamship lines to inquire into the eligibility of seamen recruited here," Long said, "would slow up travel between New Orleans and the West Indies."

When Reed said the companies should bear the expense of deportation of a man recruited abroad and brought illegally into the United States, Long said: "I'm not so sure about that."

Informed that Dr. Paul N. Cyr, a political opponent, had taken the oath as Governor of Louisiana, Senator Long said:

"His oath of office is just as good this time as it was last time. Why take another oath?"

Previously, Cyr, while lieutenant governor, took the oath of governor when Long was elected to the Senate. Long continued in that office, however, until he left Louisiana last week to become senator.

Depression Fading, Babson Declares

Statistician Says Return of Prosperity Is Slowly Being Felt.

Wellesley, Mass., Jan. 26.—Roger W. Babson, economist and statistician, who predicted the stock market break of 1929, today said in a prepared statement:

"The depression is in retreat."

Babson did not predict a quick return to prosperity, but said that the outlook at long range was for better times.

"The Babson chart, which was the basis for my forecast of the market break in 1929," said Babson, "is now with equal positiveness indicating that we have seen the trough of the depression of 1930-32, and that the present year will show an irregular movement toward higher levels.

"The chart is now turning upward for the first time in more than two years, except for the temporary rally of last spring. For some years to come I do not expect to see the Babson chart below the depth reached last November. Of course, this does not mean any sharp rise back to normal conditions, but it does indicate the depression is in retreat."

FRIENDS OF STINSON ON CORONER'S JURY

Companion Tells How Plane Struck Pole on Landing Short of Gas.

Chicago, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—The men who knew him best bade Eddie Stinson farewell today in a South Side mortuary.

From an American Legion post, of which the pioneer airman was a member, they marched to his bier and stood with bowed heads. Then two friends made arrangements to take the body of Stinson's home at Wayne, Mich., on a train leaving Chicago at midnight.

Members of the legion post made up a coroner's jury which conducted an inquiry into his death in the crash of one of his latest model airplanes last night. They continued the inquest until March 24.

Companion Tells of Crash.

On the jury was Capt. W. S. Brock, 'round-the-world flier, who used a plane designed by Stinson. Also there were George Fisher, World War flier; Lieut. Col. P. G. Kemp, Capt. B. B. Tylane, and Daniel A. Carey, all friends of Stinson.

The most detailed story of the crash which cost Stinson's life after he had flown more than 1,500,000 miles without a serious accident, was told by Fred M. Gillies, one of the three men with him at the time.

"We left Municipal airport at dusk last night," Gillies related, "and started back toward Wayne, Mich. I had the stick, and a short way out over Lake Michigan the plane began to sputter. Both Eddie and I knew the motor wasn't getting gas.

Tried for Golf Course.

"Eddie said, 'It looks like the lake for us.' We didn't want to land in the water, though, because some of us surely would have been killed. I thought of the Jackson Park golf course nearby, yelled to Eddie, and then pointed it out. He took the stick and started back.

"A hundred feet from the ground I saw a flagpole right near us. I shouted a warning to Eddie and he yelled back, 'Where is it?' Just then we crashed into it."

Two policemen testified that Clark Field, salesman for Stinson's company in Detroit, who was injured in the crash, told them the plane had run out of fuel. Another theory advanced was that the gas line became clogged. The other man injured in the crash was John Tompkins, mechanic for the Stinson Aircraft Corporation.

CUT LOOMING IN GAS AND ELECTRIC RATES

ary rate will affect 33,415 families, and will save them $65,155 during the year, based on last year's consumption. This is an average reduction of 8 per cent.

The larger electric current users in the domestic class will save even more. Those using 150 kilowatt hours, numbering 13,400, will have $91,528 cut from their bills, which is a reduction of 19 per cent. The average rate for the domestic schedule's three classes will be slightly under 3.8 cents.

The other household rate, schedule K, was also given a primary rate of 3.9 cents, but only after the first ten kilowatt hours. This rate is for electric ranges, refrigerators, and other domestic appliances for which a special meter is required. The rate, after the first ten hours, will be only 2 cents. This will effect a saving of approximately $11,500 for 6,500 customers.

These two domestic schedule rate reductions have consumed approximately $319,000 of the $860,000 available at present for rate reductions. Mr. Keech had proposed that nearly $400,000 be applied to the domestic schedules. His computation, he said, was based on the relation of domestic consumers to the whole number of electric users and on the past years' apportionment of the excess profits to the household rates.

Mr. Wood revealed that a proposed reduction in gas rates had been under consideration for some time and that the directors appeared favorable. Engineers from Stone & Webster and the United Gas Institute are studying the schedule now in New York City and will report their findings to the board.

While there have been rumors of an impending gas rate cut for several weeks, Mr. Wood's statement was the first assurance that a definite plan is under consideration. The local management had been understood to be favorable to the rate cuts, but the attitude of the Central Public Service Corporation, which controls the two local companies, was not known.

The people's counsel expressed gratification last night that the Washington Gas Light Co. had taken the initiative in proposing rate reductions rather than to resist an effort by the commission to force such a step.

Tabulations made by Mr. Keech show that the rate of the return for the two gas concerns last year, up until December 1, was 10.27 per cent and that profits totaled $500,000 although the previous rate slashing in October, 1930, had shaved $400,000 from potential returns.

PRESIDENT AND WIFE HOSTS AT RECEPTION

More Than 1,000 Present at Executive Function for House Members.

ed train. Its only trimming was gold lace, about 4 inches in depth, around the moderately low neck, which fell in a graceful circle in the back at the waistline, and which formed short sleeves. Her only ornament was a heavy gold chain about the neck, which ended in the back with a large knot between the shoulders. She also wore long white gloves.

The honor guests, according to custom, assembled in the state dining room to await the coming of the President and First Lady. The first one to be presented to the President, in the absence of the Speaker of the House and Mrs. Garner, was Representative Frank H. Foss.

Mrs. Stimson wore a becoming gown of pale blue satin, the skirt of which was made on diagonal lines. The material was brocaded in an all-over floral design of silvery blue velvet. Mrs. Hurley was charmingly gowned in tobacco brown velvet, which touched the floor, and was cut with a low V in front and back. With it she wore a short flat necklace of gold leaves. Mrs. Mitchell was in a gown of black velvet and pale blue satin brocaded in gold, the velvet forming the skirt and the satin the bodice, ending in two points in the back. Mrs. Brown wore moss green lace, trimmed with brilliants.

Mrs. Adams was gowned in rich white satin, made on princesse lines, with a short train, and trimmed with brilliants. Mrs. Hyde wore black velvet, the shoulder straps of the bodice formed of brilliants. Mrs. Lamont wore gold lace, made with a cape effect at the back, and Mrs. Doak wore a gown of cream satin, the skirt of which was trimmed with cream color lace, which fell becomingly over circular pieces.

Representative and Mrs. De Priest, of Chicago, passed through the rooms early and after being greeted by the President and First Lady went into the east room, where they stayed until shortly before the reception was over. Mrs. De Priest wore a draped gown of ecru color satin made in flaring effect and the bodice with square neck and no sleeves, the drapery of the bodice fastened with a diamond brooch.

Former Senator Present.

Former Senator and Mrs. William Alden Smith, of Grand Rapids, Mich., held a little reception of their own in the green parlor. They are here for a few days' visit and were greeted by scores of old friends and associates in the representatives' circle. Mr. Smith served in the House for many years before being elected to the Senate. Mrs. Smith wore a handsome gown of ruby velvet with trimmings of ruby beads.

It was four minutes past 10 o'clock when the receiving party left the blue room and returned upstairs, and then a portion of the Marine Band moved into the east room, where the company danced until after 10:30 o'clock.

Representative and Mrs. Frederick A. Britten were among the guests last evening, the latter wearing a Callot gown of white satin with a fish tail train, and carrying a large fan of crimson feathers. Others there were Representative and Mrs. Charles A. Eaton, the latter in a gown of green velvet, simply made; Representative and Mrs. Harry Estep, accompanied by their guests, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Murren, of Pittsburgh. Mrs. Estep wore a gown of tea-rose crepe, with crystal jewelry, and Mrs. Murren wore a gown of white satin, embroidered in crystals.

Debutante Accompanies Parents.

Representative and Mrs. Joe Smith were present, the latter in a gown of black suede-crepe, trimmed with brilliants; also Representative and Mrs. James S. Parker, the latter in a gown of gray-blue satin, fashioned on Vionnet lines; Representative and Mrs. Fred Purnell, the latter wearing a gown of white tulle trimmed with silver paillettes, and a coronet of brilliants in her hair; Representative Frederick Loofbourow, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Huntington Loofbourow, wearing a gown of black lace, and his sister-in-law, Mrs. W. H. Murgittroyd, of Spokane, Wash, in a gown of sapphire blue velvet; Representative and Mrs. Norton Lichtenwainer, the latter in a striking gown of gold lame with a short train; Representative and Mrs. Adam Wyant, accompanied by their debutante daughter, Miss Anne Wyant. Mrs. Wyant wore a gown of black velvet, and Miss Wyant wore a charming frock of red crepe, trimmed with a girdle of small cut steel beads.

Representative and Mrs. Samuel Arentz were present, accompanied by their daughters, Miss Ruby Arentz and Miss Annabell Arentz. HOOVER'S RETENTION URGED BY MRS. GANN

Vice President's Sister Tells Omahans Not to Change Captains in Storm.

Omaha, Nebr., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Declaring no ship should change captains in the midst of a hurricane, Mrs. Dolly Gann, sister of Vice President Curtis, today urged reelection of President Hoover as "more to be desired than any one thing in the coming campaign."

"No shipload of passengers would seriously think of discharging the captain in the midst of a hurricane simply because there was a hurricane, and much less would they demand the bridge after he had brought his ship safely through tempestous seas," she said in an address to a Nebraska Republican rally here.

"As a result of constructive measures the President has taken," she said, "the great masses of the people have never discovered that they were in hard times and have gone about their mirths and their employments without ever having found it necessary to limit in any degree their standards of living.

See Influence Inspiring.

"To see his strong, inspiring and steadying influence withdrawn from international councils," she declared, "would be an immeasurable calamity not only for our country but to the whole world. To make his reelection effective, we must give him the support of a Congress safely Republican in both houses."

Discussing the recent Democratic Jackson Day dinner in Washington, Mrs. Gann commented: "The only thing upon which there appeared to be unanimous agreement seems to be expressed in the Democratic slogan, 'He-haw, we're coming back.'"

"How perfectly this elevated sentiment fits and reflects the Democratic attitude toward a political victory," she said.

Warns Against Quack Nostrums.

After reviewing world-wide economic developments and the administration's efforts to ameliorate them in the United States, she warned against turning to "quack political nostrums for relief." She urged cooperation with the Republican party's campaign of education to meet "the fallacies of irrational radicalism with the facts of demonstrated experience."

She devoted much of her address to showing that the interests of agriculture were not slighted in compilation of the Hawley-Smoot tariff.

Mrs. Gann left tonight for a visit to Topeka, Kans., before returning to Washington.

Dry Law Written By Volstead Alone

Denies Wayne B. Wheeler Helped Him to Frame Prohibition Bill.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Andrew J. Volstead today said he was sole author of the prohibition act bearing his name, he said so in commenting on a New York address in which the 1928 Democratic presidential candidate, Alfred E. Smith, last night said Wayne B. Wheeler had admitted authorship to him.

"Mr. Wheeler during his lifetime never said I did not write the bill, nor did he ever claim authorship for it," Volstead said.

The first prohibition enabling act came from Wheeler, prominent in Antisaloon League activities, said the local dry leader.

"I rejected Wheeler's bill and refused to present it to the committee," he asserted. "Naturally there is a similarity between all such bills, but any one who will examine the bills will find the difference."

Insane Man Shoots 5, Then Slays Self

Panic Created in Bank as Bachelor Begins Firing; Formerly Wealthy.

Lansing, Mich., Jan 26 (A.P.).—Becoming suddenly insane, a man described by acquaintances as unusually "quiet, courteous and intelligent," shot up the Capital National Bank this afternoon, wounding five persons and, as a crowd rushed for the exits, calmly reloaded his pistol, placed it in his mouth and ended his life.

The man, D. J. Mead, 52, bachelor, and member of a one-time wealthy Lansing family, had been in the bank about ten minutes before he whipped out his pistol and began firing.

Of the injured, two are in serious condition. They are B. W. Nichols, a depositor, shot through the neck, and Albert Elsesser, executive vice president of the bank, shot through the right shoulder and right side. The others injured were David Timmons, a bank guard; John Lillie and Miss Lucille Duncan, depositors.

Theatrical Agent Gets 14 Months for Assault

Boston, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Morris Levine, a theatrical booking agent, was given a sentence of 14 months in the house of correction today for assaulting Miss Joan Lowell, authoress of sea stories and now a Boston newspaper reporter. The hearing was private before a judge and without a jury.

Miss Lowell said that while gathering information for a series of newspaper articles on the conditions encountered by girls looking for work, she went to Levine's office. While there, she charged, he attempted to attack her. She said she managed to free herself and accepted Levine's overture to meet her in her room later. When Levine arrived policemen who were hidden in the house arrested him.

Drive Reveals Officers Aid Omaha Bootleggers

Omaha, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—As United States District Attorney Charles Sandall issued a statement today, saying that he had obtained "ample evidence of collusion between officers and bootleggers," Harold D. Wilson, prohibition administrator, opened a drive against a "liquor syndicate."

Wilson made more than 60 arrests today, detaining the prisoners in a Federal Building corridor. Wilson was transferred here two weeks ago from Delaware, to replace Gen. William Bowan.

MYSTERY OF ATOMS IS NEARER SOLUTION

3 Carnegie Institution Men Describe Photography of Hydrogen Protons.

New York, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Protons, the positive bits of electricity which constitute the secret of the nuclei of atoms, have been photographed for the first time.

This was announced today in the Physical Review, in a report by three internationally known scientists of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, M. A. Tuve, L. R. Hafstad and O. Dahl.

Their camera is said to give the first really unmistakable visible record of protons. This photography is another stride toward discovering how atoms are made. It gives scientists one more tool for solving the riddle whereby apparently all solid substances are made from nothing except positive and negative charges of electricity.

It is also one more step toward "unlocking the energy of the atom," that is, discovering whether man can get any useful power out of smashing atoms.

For several years scientists have been able to photograph the negative electrical charges, the electroms. In an apparatus called the Wilson Cloud chamber, the electrons leave trails that look just like the smoke skywriting done by airplanes. The slower moving protons, weighing nearly 2,000 times as much as electrons, yet apparently even smaller, have escaped the camera.

The Carnegie Institution men get the proton pictures in the same kind of Wilson Cloud chamber, with aid of improved photograph and an automatic camera. They announce that they have been able to photograph and measure the distance which protons travel in air when shot out from a million volt energy source. The distance is about an inch and a half.

These protons are the nuclei of hydrogen atoms, produced by bombarding hydrogen with the beams of a 1,000,000-volt X-Ray tube. This bombardment smashes the hydrogen atoms and the protons go flying out at speeds of several thousand miles a second.

The report says about 50 pictures of proton tracks have been obtained. In each photo there are the trails of from ten to several hundred protons.

3 More Convicts Escape in Georgia

Notorious Trio Flees in Auto, Killing Man Who Blocks Path.

Milledgeville, Ga., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Aubrey Smith, Abe Powers and Roy Gardner, three notorious convicts, escaped from the State prison today and fled with an expensive limousine in which they ran down and killed a trusted prisoner who sought to halt them.

The prisoner killed was John S. Williams, life term slayer who operated a "murder farm" near Covington about ten years ago on which eleven Negroes, the State charged, were slain. Escape of the three brought to five the number of criminals who have fled the prison in the past week. Leland Harvey and Jack Martin, prison pals of Smith, got out of the death cell Friday.

The three broke out of a portable steel cage in the tuberculosis ward, stole the sedan of the prison physician and whizzed past a posse stationed on the outskirts of town. It was here that they ran down Williams, deliberately, guards said.

1932 FETE SUPPLIES GONE, FESS ASSERTS

Funds Lacking to Replenish Stock of Pamphlets on Washington.

The United States Bicentennial Commission has exhausted its supply of pamphlets on the life of George Washington, and is unable to satisfy demands made upon it, Vice Chairman Simeon D. Fess told the Senate yesterday. By implication his statement was a mild rebuke to Congress.

Citing the $177,000 cut in bicentennial deficiency funds by the House, and the $50,000 further reduction by the Senate, Senator Fess said he wanted to make clear the commission is not to blame for failure to comply with requests.

He read into the record a resolution adopted by the Indiana Bicentennial Commission, asking additional pamphlets in order to carry out bicentennial observance as planned. The commission was unable to supply the pamphlets. He added the commission is faced with many such demands.

The first deficiency bill containing a Senate appropriation of $200,000 for bicentennial activities and a House appropriation of $250,000, is still in conference.

Later yesterday the Senate passed a bill introduced by Fess, empowering the commission to issue additional sets of the writings of George Washington, at a cost of $56,000. Senator Fess explained that the sets, consisting of 25 volumes each, would pay for themselves. They would be sold to libraries for $50 apiece, and to the general public at cost, allowing for a loss on the library editions.

Walls Crack as Quake Rocks Wyoming Town

Jackson, Wyo., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Earth disturbances cracked the foundations of buildings and shook merchandise from the shelves of stores here early today. Residents were awakened by the first shock, which occurred at 3:15 a. m. Many persons ran into the street.

The disturbances continued until 5 a. m. and were accompanied by loud rumblings, likened to the sound of a stampeding herd of cattle. No serious damage was done, but nearly every building in Jackson showed some evidence of the quake. Dishes were broken when they were knocked from shelves and breakable merchandise was damaged.

George Turner, Former Senator, Dies in Spokane

Spokane, Wash., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—George Turner, 84, United States senator from 1897 to 1903 and a signer of the Washington State Constitution, died here today. He had been ill several weeks.

Previous to his term as senator, Turner was an associate justice of the State supreme court for four years. He was a member of the commission which settled the Alaska Boundary dispute between the United States and Great Britain in 1903 and also was counsel for the United States at the Fisheries Arbitration Conference with Great Britain in 1910.

MINERS HEAR GREEN ATTACK WAGE CUTS

Plight of Unemployed Is Stressed at Session in Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—The plight of the unemployed, particularly economic distress in coal-mining communities, was emphasized by speakers today at the opening session of the biennial convention of the United Mine Workers of America.

"A constant standing army of unemployed is a menace to any Government," declared William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. "When such a condition prevails the people think and speak in strange terms.

"I do not believe that our capitalistic system is a complete success. Perhaps the trouble is in the management of the system. Therefore our one great demand must be that the wealth of the Nation, created by the men who labor, must be more equitably distributed, and by the payment of decent wages. If this is refused then we will have to call in the taxing power of the Nation and levy on incomes. If that is not sufficient then a high inheritance and gift tax must be imposed."

He appealed to the mine workers to stand loyally by their officials.

Another speaker of the morning session was Thomas N. Taylor, president of the Indiana Federation of Labor, who voiced an imperative demand for unemployment relief. The American workman, he said, prefers to have a job, but he is insistent on having food. He ridiculed the "dole scarecrow" and added that the $2,000,000,000 for finance reconstruction could not be considered a dole for "to give a dole is to give sparingly."

Approximately 1,000 delegates are attending the convention which will continue for a week or more.

There was no indication today that the Pennsylvania anthracite miners would hold a caucus on the question of work equalization in their field. The anthracite miners have a 5½-year contract which will run until April, 1936, and there seems no disposition among the mine leaders to tamper with it.

Adolph Fritz, secretary of the Indiana Federation of Labor, was the temporary chairman of the convention. He characterized President John L. Lewis as "the greatest man in the labor movement today."

Alabama Capitol Guarded on Threat

Reported Bombing Plot Results in Steps for Protection.

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—A plot to bomb Alabama's historic capitol, revealed in a letter to a State official, caused guards to be posted at the State House today, the Associated Press was authoritatively informed tonight.

The official, who wished his name withheld, said the letter was sent to John Brandon, State auditor, by a man in Birmingham who said he overhead four men in a depot there plotting the bombing.

The bombing, the official quoted the letter as saying, was set for either today or tomorrow and had as its intended victims Gov. B. M. Miller, William F. Feagin, director of the State Board of Administration, John Peach, legal advisor to the governor, and Roy Nolan, assistant director of the State convict department.

Low Mark of 1888 Hit By English Shipbuilders

London, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—The shipbuilding industry in Great Britain and Ireland declined last year to the lowest point since 1888, Lloyd's annual summary said today.

During the year 148 merchant vessels were built with a total tonnage of 502,487. This represented a decrease of 976,076 tons from 1930 and was only 31.1 per cent of the world's output, as compared with 51.2 per cent in 1930. The summary added that there was little prospect of an immediate improvement.

Free State Police Near Break With Government

Dublin, Irish Free State, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—The Free State government and the Free State police appeared to be on the verge of an open break today as the result of a move to cut the police pay 5 per cent, beginning February 1.

The policemen's representative organization resigned after having refused to meet the government's representatives for a peace parley, leaving nobody empowered to act for the police.

TROUBLE ZONE

AMERICA IS AROUSED OVER JAPAN'S STEPS

Hawaii and later along the West Coast, constituting one of the greatest displays in years of the Nation's potential seapower on the Pacific. Japan not only has completed her capture of Manchuria, but is menacing the International Settlement at Shanghai.

Officials do not speak publicly of the maneuvers and the Japanese problem in the same breath, yet the coincidence has not escaped notice either in official or diplomatic circles.

The maneuvers were planned months ago, and the display of strength almost at Japan's doorstep is regarded officially as entirely of peaceful intent. It can be said definitely, however, that a good part of the world will be curious to know whether there will be any effect on the policy of armed Japanese expansion now in full swing in China.

As it stands today, the situation at Shanghai is that the Japanese admiral has in his pocket orders from Tokyo to break China's boycott of Japanese goods, a boycott which is being felt in Japan. To back up his demand the Japanese admiral has a large naval force there and more ships on the way. He has promised, however, not to employ force against the Chinese in the settlement without first consulting the settlement officials—mostly British and American.

Meanwhile, with the Manchurian campaign still fresh in their minds, the threat of possible action has caused the Chinese to give in on several important points to Japan and the situation is easing.

America and Great Britain figure in the picture mainly from a business standpoint. Their contention in the problem is that the Japanese are not justified in causing such a stir over the boycott in an otherwise peaceful community. Trade is being disturbed and a definite outbreak might well cause a disruption of the business machinery of Shanghai and the Yangtze River Valley.

A consultation with the other powers would appear a logical step for the United States, but officials would not say whether it would be taken. Several times the United States has acted alone in the problem since it first became acute last September, but there were several high officials who admitted yesterday they felt the situation was growing so complex and delicate that the only effective record of adverse opinion to Japan's position could be through concerted action.

DIXIE RIVERS RISE; MANY FLEE HOMES

Heavy Rainfall Results in Warning of Floods in Wide Area.

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Hundreds of lowland residents in Arkansas and Louisiana took precautions today against swollen streams fed by heavy rains during the last 24 hours.

Warned by the United States Weather Bureau in Washington of impending rises, residents of the Ouachita, Black and Red Rivers looked for floods "exceeding the 1927 heights."

The Weather Bureau announcement said "in the last 24 hours rains have been general in the lower Ohio Valley, and in the Mississippi Valley from Dubuque, Iowa, to the Gulf."

Rising waters of four Arkansas rivers threatened the homes of hundreds of lowland dwellers. More than 100 families near El Dorado may abandon their homes because of the flooded Ouachita and smaller tributaries.

Fifteen hundred persons in Northern Louisiana, threatened by the Ouachita, have moved to high grounds.

Levees of the Red River near Texarkana were believed endangered and the White River was rising. In southern Missouri, the St. Francis threatened its levees with stages almost as high as in 1929 and 1930, when levees failed to hold.

In Mississippi, new sections of the Yazoo River levee were endangered and one 150-foot break south of Belzoni sent water over thousands of acres. Some 300 families were forced from their homes by three other breaks in the Yazoo. Near Hard Cash 50 families were marooned, clinging to housetops.

Two persons were believed drowned in the St. Francis in Arkansas.

John Hall and Arthur Madison, rivermen, who left their homes Saturday, were reported missing since the wreckage of their motorboat was found Sunday.

Senate Group Approves Shaffer for U. S. Post

(Associated Press.)

Members of the Senate judiciary subcommittee investigating Joseph C. Shaffer, of Wytheville, nominee for United States attorney for the Western District of Virginia, are favorable to his confirmation by the Senate.

Senators Hastings (Republican), Delaware, chairman, and Stephens (Democrat), Mississippi, composing the subcommittee, said yesterday they were prepared to give their approval to his nomination. They will make their report at the next meeting of the full committee, probably within the next few days, indicating early Senate approval of the nomination.

Vice War Bombing Kills Aged Couple

Innocent Victims Die in Sleep as Conflcit in Illinois Goes On.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—An aged couple slain in their sleep were the innocent victims today of a vice war which has taken ten lives within recent months.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Hungerford, each about 75 years old, were killed by a bomb which destroyed the Italian Villa cafe above which was their apartment. Tonight it appeared that no prosecution would follow the renewal of the battle for illicit liquor and gambling privileges here. No charges were brought after any of the eight recent slayings attributed to the same cause.

The bomb, apparently a time mechananism planted earlier in the evening, exploded just before dawn. It demolished the ground floor, occupied by a cabaret operated by Paul Termine and Sam Vizzini, and set fire to the second story. The Hungerfords died in the blast, but other occupants escaped with only slight injuries. Firemen halted the blaze after a four-hour fight.

INFLATION FEARS UNFOUNDED.

Fear that the United States is embarking on a policy of inflation to counteract the depression is absolutely unfounded. Reports that President Hoover is supporting a movement to expand the issue of currency can be dismissed as utterly false. The President's program involves merely the loosening of credit. In no way does it contemplate or tolerate the thought of cheapening the currency.

The chief misunderstanding of the administration's fiscal policy seems to arise in Europe. Apparently the function of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has been misconstrued. Europe seems anxious to exploit every rumor concerning instability in the United States, and there is suggestive evidence that when no rumors are available European institutions manufacture them. Statements by Americans in public life are twisted to suggest that this country is on the brink of financial distress, and that the administration is secretly fostering inflationary measures.

Nothing could be further from the truth. The administration realizes that credit has been restricted, and that more than $1,200,000,000 has gone into hoarding. President Hoover recommended his relief program to arrest this contraction of credit, which has been forcing uneconomic liquidation of securities, and not to bring about inflation. The American dollar is a gold dollar and will remain so.

The experience of countries that have been forced off the gold standard offers no encouragement for the United States to institute an inflationary policy. In each of these countries prices are rising while the value of currency declines, so that the tendency is to reestablish the previous relationship of values on a lower level. Congress has had too much experience with inflated foreign currency to indulge in any reckless experiment to cure the depression by destroying the value of money.

POSTOFFICE WASTE.

Although the House ways and means committee refused to consider the postal rate changes advocated by Postmaster General Brown, the movement to wipe out the postal deficit has by no means been abandoned. It is to be hoped that the committee on postoffices and post roads will study the adjustment of rates to actual services rendered by the various branches of the postal system. In the meantime a movement is under way in the Senate to reduce the cost of this department.

Senator King has introduced a bill authorizing the Postmaster General to carry on the rural delivery service on a contract basis. At present most of the rural carriers are paid annual salaries. This method is a carry-over from the days when mail was transported by horse and buggy, or even on horseback, over unimproved country roads. Under those circumstances a rural carrier was required to spend his full time covering his route. The mails moved sluggishly, in accordance with the state of the weather.

Today the entire situation has been changed. Rural carriers, for the most part, skim over smooth, hard-surfaced highways in automobiles. Routes which once required their full time can now be covered in a few hours. In many instances the carriers engage in a profitable transport business along with their delivery of mail, adding profits to regular salaries. While the time and effort required of rural carriers has been reduced, salaries have moved in the opposite direction. As a result the Postoffice Department is employing several times the number of carriers needed for this work, and wasting a sum estimated at $40,000,000 annually.

The bill designed to end this extravagant system will encounter no end of opposition. It will be denounced as an assault upon faithful Government workers, and as an attempt to throw Federal employes out of work in the midst of the depression. But, as a matter of fact, it is merely a move to reduce fat bonuses paid to mail carriers for services which they no longer render. If the contract system were put into operation most of the same individuals who now carry the mails would continue to do so. But they would be required to bid against competitors instead of enjoying an annual salary for part-time work.

The King bill ought to become a law. Doubtless millions of dollars could be saved in other divisions of the postal service by the adoption of business methods. Before asking for higher rates the department ought to devise means of cutting off needless expenditures.

AMERICAN SHIPPING.

The fifth national shipping conference which opens its sessions at the United States Chamber of Commerce this morning will be faced with a number of difficult problems. This conference meets at a time when the world shipping industry is at a low ebb. It is only through organized effort that constructive remedies can be projected. Those responsible for having organized the American shipping interests five years ago to cope with such problems as these are to be commended for their foresight.

During the last ten years American shipping has gone steadily forward. The highly constructive shipping legislation contained in the merchant marine acts of 1920 and 1928 has given impetus to the permanent establishment of an American merchant marine.

American shipping and shipbuilding have advanced from an obscure position during this period to that of second place in shipbuilding activities, and the American merchant marine is now the second largest in the world.

The task which lies ahead is to retain that position. The country at large has come to the full realization that America's position upon the seas must be strong commercially and politically, as well as for purposes of national defense.

The far-reaching benefits of a stronger merchant marine will be realized from the fact that during the last ten years, out of a total of 900,000,000 tons of the waterborne foreign trade of the United States, valued at $74,000,000,000, American ships transported one-third in value and over 40 per cent in volume. The estimated freight and passenger revenues derived from this vast carrying trade totaled $9,000,000,000, of which one-third of the amount was paid to American ships.

Without the constructive legislation to encourage American shipping, the percentage carried by American ships would probably have continued as it did in the decade prior to 1914, when Americans transported only 10 per cent in their own vessels. Therefore, the gain in the percentage carried during the last ten years amounts to over two and one-half billions of dollars. Contrasting this huge sum with the expenditures made in the building up of world trade routes, services and good will, the effort appears fully justified from the commercial standpoint alone.

There is every reason to feel that at this conference constructive measures will be formulated to tide over temporary difficulties to enable this country to maintain its position.

It is worthy of note that during the keen competition of the last year there has been a slight gain in the carriage of American foreign trade in American ships.

GOVERNMENT PURCHASES.

Under present regulations purchases of supplies for the various branches and departments of the Government must be made from the lowest bidder. Due to existing world conditions the desire to realize upon foreign government-controlled products, regardless of cost, or cheaper production, under depreciated currency in other countries, has in several recent cases enabled foreign firms seeking Government contracts to underbid American firms.

This is a situation utterly at variance with American ideas of protecting home industry, and President Hoover will seek early remedy for it from Congress. Legislation will be requested that will enable all Government necessities to be supplied by American-made goods. The United States Government should not be left in a position in which it is compelled to purchase foreign supplies.

Undoubtedly a measure to remedy this situation will find ready support in both the Senate and House. To compel Federal agencies to set the example of buying foreign-made goods at a time when every effort is being made to stimulate national industries is repellent to the American sense of justice. Executive initiative to relieve all departments from the technical necessity of considering imported goods of any kind in preference to those of domestic origin will meet not only with legislative but general approval.

EUROPE FACES THE MUSIC.

Sentiment in the United States against any further concessions to Europe on intergovernmental debts is having a salutary effect. Premier Laval of France has proposed that the creditors of Germany arrange to relieve that country for another short period without regard to the position of the United States. This is the only practical attitude that France can take. Germany may be expected to object to a temporary postponement of the larger issue involved, but the Reich is in a position where it must take what it can get.

Premier Laval's plan calls for a suspension of reparation payments until after the election in the United States. Germany's creditors would be called into conference during the early part of the summer to work out the details. Presumably Europe would then present a united front in asking the United States to suspend again the installments on the international debts.

The French and British are beginning to realize at last that there is no connection between the war debts and reparations and that they can not bamboozle Uncle Sam into admitting such a connection. There is only one course open to them—to deal with Germany as the economic conditions in that country warrant. When that has been done the United States will be ready to listen to any appeal that any debtor nation, unable to meet its obligations, wishes to make. But present indications are that Congress will allow no further delay in making the annual payments, except in the manner provided in the funding agreements.

Too much hope is placed in the American election this fall by European statesmen who are not anxious to face the facts as now presented. It is extremely unlikely that the election will have any bearing upon the attitude of Congress. The position which the United States has assumed is not partisan. It grows out of the wishes of the whole people. If the European powers postpone their ultimate decision of the issue until after the election, hoping to profit by a weakening of the determination in this country to yield no further, they will be disappointed.

Europe has become too accustomed to leaning upon the United States for support. The tightening of the fiscal policy in Washington should be of substantial assistance in restoring Europe to self-sufficiency. Once the creditors of Germany settle down to a definite policy, without trying to pass the buck to the United States, they will be able to chart their course with more certainty. Any other policy would merely serve to perpetuate the demoralizing illusion that the American taxpayers will take these obligations upon themselves.

WASHINGTON'S POSTMASTER.

William M. Mooney has been reappointed postmaster of Washington. One good term deserved another, and two good terms make a third a certainty. Mr. Mooney's efficiency can be well gauged by the fact that the public rarely stops to ask whether Washington has a postmaster. Like the happy nations that have no history, the postoffice of Washington operates without publicity, and automatically delivers the goods.

We don't know whether Mr. Mooney is a Democrat or a Republican, but since he was first appointed by President Harding it seems likely that he is a Republican. In distributing the mails, however, he is strictly nonpartisan, delivering Democratic campaign documents to Republicans and vice versa with admirable impartiality. How he disposes daily of the mountainous masses of franked public documents without increasing the national debt is a secret that reposes in the bosom of Postmaster Mooney and which should not be wrested from him. Let him preserve the mystery inviolable.

England wants loans made to the Southern States deducted from the war debts due the United States. Next thing we know John Bull will be trying to collect for the tea destroyed by the Boston Tea Party.

The charge is made that American people are the greatest of all gamblers. Probably we have become addicts by taking a chance every time we go to the polls to vote.

In ancient Rome a man always acquired the "last book" published. History is silent, however, as to whether he acquired it from his neighbors, as Americans do.

It is proposed to protect American musicians from foreign competition. Evidently this is a move to ban foreign notes along with foreign bonds.

"ALFALFA BILL"

From the Louisville Courier-Journal.

By a subtle process of elimination Gov. "Alfalfa Bill" Murray of Oklahoma is going to let the people find out for themselves whom he favors for the Presidency. He's too coy to tell them. And won't they be surprised when it dawns on them what "Alfalfa" kept unuttered in his mind all the time?

The end of the suspense mercifully is in sight at the rate he is disposing of the opposition. He administered the coup de grace to Owen D. Young in a speech at Omaha and put in a stealthy lick for November by condemning Young as no better than Hoover. Roosevelt was stopped by a back-handed slap delivered in an interview, as "a very smart man," but unfit. Baker was dismissed as a "baby." There remain Ritchie, Smith, Byrd, McAdoo and a few others; but with such a start he ought to be able to polish them off in short order.

"Alfalfa" isn't personally ambitious. He is fighting for a cause, to rescue "the middle and poor classes" from "economic slavery" and "restore the interests of the farmer and the little business man," though the idea is rather invidious by way of class distinction. His terrifying picture of "economic slaves" cultivating corporation-owned farms may be potent if the present owners are not captivated by the idea of unloading their acreage on corporations.

The objects of "Alfalfa's" solicitude are "the great common people," dear to the hearts of public men from time immemorial. It is to their comfort, happiness and prosperity that he has dedicated his voice. He is clearing the way for attainment by removing all obstacles, beginning with candidates. He doubtless is inspired by the confidence that in every crisis Providence produces a man. It is even possible that, in the event all other available material proves defective, "Alfalfa" himself might be induced to heed the call to leadership.

JUST FOLKS

HAPPINESS.

If luxury and lavishness
One extra day of life could add,
Or make one hour of suffering less,
Then would the loss of them be bad.

If fortune and its pomp and pride
Could guarantee the gift of health
And keep man's loved ones at his side,
He well might mourn the loss of wealth.

If high place could insure content
And save his house from folly's shame,
Then all man's courage should be spent
To reach the topmost rung of fame.

But love and laughter and the health
That truly make it good to live,
Lie not within the power of wealth,
Or fame, or place, or pomp to give

Delight is of the heart and mind,
Not stored in books or jars on shelves;
The happiness men yearn to find
Lies hidden deep within themselves.

Your Opinion of Movies Is of Little Worth If You Never Attend

By ROBERT QUILLEN

IF YOU are serving as a juror, under oath to find the verdict required by the law and the evidence, you feel an honest man's contempt for the one who consults only his prejudices and wholly disregards the testimony that disagrees with it.

Or if you hear that some person with authority, required to serve as judge in some matter, refused to hear one side of the story or permit the accused man to testify in his own defense, you are filled with righteous scorn and indignation.

In short, your sense of fair play and your regard for the eternal fitness of things are outraged by any decision that disregards the evidence.

And your reaction is decent and right.

But are you quite sure that the fault you condemn is not one of your own?

Disregarding the evidence presented is no whit worse in its effect than failure to obtain evidence, and if the effect is the same in both cases, how can one act be less evil than the other? The tree is judged by its fruit, not by the planter's intentions.

On what evidence do you base your opinions?

Let us say that you denounce or praise the new order in Russia. On what ground? Have you been in Russia? Have you studied the testimony of trustworthy men who have been there? Do you really know anything about the matter, or have you based your verdict on the hearsay evidence of witnesses disqualified by prejudice?

Or suppose you have hard and fast opinions concerning the race question in the South, the Jap problem of the Pacific Coast, or the Canadian method of solving the liquor question.

How were your opinions formed? Have you been in any one of these places to study its problems? Have you examined qualified and unprejudiced witnesses? Have you made an honest effort to get at the truth? Or have you, again, based your opinions on evidence that no court in the land would admit?

Your opinions shape your character and reveal the degree of your intelligence. Are they of so little importance that you can trust their formation to irresponsible hearsay evidence or the testimony of witnesses inspired by pay or prejudice?

PRO AND CON

Press Comment Upon Acts and Actors in the Great American Show, "Politics."

Farmers Should Beware.

Minneapolis Journal.

The tariff bill passed a few days ago by the House of Representatives will not become a law, but as an expression of Democratic party policy it is significant. The bill represents the strategy of the present opposition in handling the tariff issue. In one of its sections, the bill makes a congressional request to the President to "initiate a movement for an international conference, with a view of lowering excessive tariff duties."

A conference of this sort can mean only one thing—bargaining and concessions between the participating nations. What concessions would be expected of the United States? It is easy to forecast them. The chief complaints from other countries against the Hawley-Smoot law have concerned the agricultural schedules. Canada has protested the new rates on dairy products. So has Denmark, while Argentina has complained of the duties on meat products, casein and corn.

Against Salary Cuts.

Houston Post-Dispatch.

It is not surprising to find the President balking at proposals for wage and salary cutting. When this depression started he secured promises from industrial and big business leaders that wage levels would not be lowered. It was his theory that the depression would pass more quickly if the purchasing power of the wage and salary earners should be kept up. Industry did not keep faith with the President and has been slashing salaries right and left, especially during the last six months.

There is no doubt that this general curtailment of popular purchasing power has accentuated the recession in business. The President has stood out against impairment of purchasing power and naturally does not want the Federal Government to set an example before private industry in forcing down the American standard of living.

European Ethics.

Akron Beacon-Journal.

If a nation breaks its word about invading Belgium, that's an atrocity. If it breaks its word about paying loans, that's economic necessity.

Federal Aid for Everybody.

Christian Science Monitor.

All in less time than from luncheon to dinner, the principal measure in President Hoover's economic relief program—the $2,000,000,000 Reconstruction Finance Corporation bill—came from the conference committee, was passed by the House of Representatives, passed by the Senate, sent to the White House and signed by the President. Now, to assure Mr. John Citizen, wherever he lives, that better times are on the way to his house with something like comparable speed, the newly appointed directors are preparing to get the huge corporation into action next week.

Briefly, the new organization is a mammoth money-lending institution. It represents a new mechanism for the dispersion of Government credit to private organizations and through them to the public generally. Yet it is not entirely a new mechanism either, for one similar to it worked effectively in dispelling the depression of 1921.

Gov. Roosevelt's Candidacy.

Brooklyn Citizen (Dem.).

Gov. Roosevelt, in permitting his name to be used in the North Dakota preferential primaries as a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, has finally thrown his hat into the ring.

He continues to use the stale subterfuge that he has no intention to actively engage in a contest for the nomination, but will devote all his time and attention to his duties as governor of this State.

His platform, as far as indicated by his letter, is that of the "Progressives." Under the name and style of "Progressive" many demi-Socialists are masquerading as Republicans or Democrats. The main platform of the Progressives is antagonism to big business and Wall street. This sentiment is widely diffused in the Northwest and the South, and it is precisely in these sections of the country that Gov. Roosevelt derives his strength.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Bicentennial Commission Sends Out George Washington Data to Be Read by the Blind.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial concerning the paper for blind children, printed in Braille, is very interesting, but the writer of that article might have gone farther and told your readers of the Braille printing constantly going on in the Bicentennial Commission. In one of the rooms of that big office there is employed a young lady who is without the power of sight. But she is able to, and does, reproduce many of the interesting stories which the commission sends out so industriously. These reproductions are in Braille, and are freely distributed to institutions for the care of the blind in every State of the Union. Mr. Bloom has done wonders in "selling" George Washington to his countrymen, but nothing accomplished by the Bicentennial Commission is more commendable than its efforts to tell the unfortunates who can not see for themselves all those interesting facts concerning the colonial history of our country, and especially those facts about the life and times of the Father of His Country, which have been so diligently unearthed.

Destruction of the Mall Dreaded by Old Resident—Keep It a Wooded Park.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have lived here nearly all my life, and as soon as I was old enough and began to pay attention to municipal growth it pleased me to think of the Mall as a completed part of the National Capital. My idea was that the Mall development would be distinctly sylvan, like that of the old Smithsonian grounds.

Sad to say, the Smithsonian grounds no longer furnish a charming example of what Washington, L'Enfant and Jefferson must have had in mind when the Mall idea was born. It is true that, owing to the trees which have been spared, the grounds are still attractive, but their sylvan aspect has suffered through the intrusion of a group of buildings which are not only misplaced, but entirely out of harmony with each other.

The adjoining Agricultural grounds are being plowed up and leveled off at a cost which is more than the slight improvement, if any, is worth. The delightful ginkgo colonnade of the Thirteenth street drive has been sacrificed to allow for more formal treatment, and as in the case of the Smithsonian grounds—that is, unless there is a change in city planning in this connection—the erection of a costly building or so is likely in the course of time.

The orderly laying out of a city park is, of course, to be desired, but in a reservation the size of the Mall there is such a thing as being too meticulous. In the growth of Washington, befitting architecture is of prime importance, but the architectural state of mind is objectionable when it interferes with the judicious planning of the landscape engineer.

There are portions of the Mall still free from obtrusive structures. If Congress would only hold in check the architectural temptation to divide it into building sites, it might yet, at the comparatively slight cost required to develop and accentuate the rus-in-urbe charm, stand unique among the magnificent parks of the world.

Of course, I know that the Mall park, under formal treatment, will not be lacking in beauty. But its beauty will be that of many parks elsewhere. What I would like is a park strictly American in its design. I think visitors to the National Capital would take great delight in a wooded city park distinguished by memorials of pioneer life—of America in the rough—log cabins and blockhouses—reminders of such heroic but informal Americans, let us say, as young George Washington, Daniel Boone, George Rogers Clark, Gen. Jackson, Davey Crockett, Kit Carson, Buffalo Bill and Abraham Lincoln.

Virginia Baptist Says His Denomination Is 95 Per Cent Dry.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Letters signed "Virginia Democrat," appearing in your valued paper from time to time, have been read by me with much interest. I have wondered who it was who assumed the responsibility of speaking for the Virginia Democrats. So far as I am concerned, he has that privilege, but when he assumes the same authority to speak for the Baptists I am going to object, especially when he makes misstatements of the facts. I am also a Baptist and connected officially with that great body, and feel I know a great deal about the opinions of Baptists on prohibition and the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment, and can truthfully say that our denomination is 95 per cent for this law. We are not ashamed of the part we played in the 1928 election, and will again show our strength should our party force an unwilling wet upon us in 1932. A. N. SHUMAN.

Woman Taxpayer Praises Secretary Mellon for His Work for the Government.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was delighted to see in your columns a letter commending Mr. Mellon, our most able Secretary of the Treasury. If I were a man I should doff my hat as he passes, in honor of the work he has done for our Government. Should some of his critics compare the work they have done with Mr. Mellon's, I fear they would be embarrassed. I think and feel that the loyal American citizen appreciates Mr. Mellon and the effort he has made for the people. May he have our gratitude and the satisfaction in his heart of work well done.

CONTRACT ON BRIDGE APPROACH ROAD DUE

Government Expected to Let Award by February 1 on Surfacing.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Cla. 509. Clarendon, Va.

An approach to the Arlington Memorial Bridge is possible from the road passing the Arlington National Cemetery and leading into the Oil road, thence to Rosslyn, it was learned yesterday.

It was learned from an authoritative source yesterday that the Federal Government expects to award the contract for the surfacing of that section leading from the bridgehead and connecting with the approach into the Arlington National Cemetery by February 1. With the contract awarded at that time, it is understood that there will be a hard-surfaced road leading to the bridge within 60 days.

In conference with the county manager of Arlington County yesterday, it was learned that the Arlington County Board is making a study of an approach to the bridge, and it is expected that it will be one of the first major projects undertaken by the new county board.

At present the bridge is open to the public on Saturdays and Sundays until sundown, and the only approach Virginia motorists have is by way of entrances from the Highway Bridge.

Speaking at the meeting of the Lyon Village Citizens Association at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert N. Anderson last night, Roy S. Braden, county manager, appealed to members of the association to support members of the county board in all their undertakings.

The association went on record as opposing any move by the Virginia Legislature that will do anything but enlarge the Eighth Congressional District.

County Manager Braden will confer with presidents and chiefs of the several fire departments at his office tonight at 8 o'clock.

Dr. P. M. Chichester, Arlington County health officer, yesterday completed work upon the schedule for preventive dental clinics for all children from 2½ to 6 years old.

Sites of the clinics, which will be open from 9 a. m. to noon and from 1 to 4 o'clock, and their rates, follow:

Clarendon Health Center, February 1 and 2, March 7 and 8, April 4, May 2 and 3, June 6 and 7; Virginia Highlands Health Center, February 3, March 9, April 6, May 4, June 8; Cherrydale Health Center, February 4, March 10, April 7, May 5 and June 9.

Charged with robbery, Clerks Alsbrook, colored, was held for action of the Arlington grand jury by Judge B. M. Hedrick in the county court yesterday. Alsbrook was identified by persons claimed to have been held up during the last few months. Alsbrook protested his innocence.

Dining Car Builder Sues Hyattsville

Seeks Injunction After Town Calls Halt to Construction.

Alleging that the government of the town of Hyattsville has stopped the construction of a dining car on land he owns in the town, J. Frank Lillard has filed in the Marlboro Circuit Court a petition for an injunction restraining town officials from interfering with the work.

Mr. Lillard says he is using the lot only as a temporary location for the dining car, which has wheels and will be removed when finished. He also characterizes it as "beautiful in design." When work was about half done on the car, he says, the town council ordered him to stop work and threatened his workmen with arrest if they continued. He names as defendants the mayor and common council of Hyattsville and Caesar L. Aiello, who is town attorney.

It is understood that the council objects to the construction of a car because no building permit was asked for or issued.

Herndon Firemen Quit Association

Claim Cooperation Lack; T. Edgar Reed Renamed as President.

Members of the Volunteer Fire Department at Herndon, Va., at their annual meeting, voted to withdraw from the Arlington-Fairfax Volunteer Firemen's Association.

The members stated they did not believe there was sufficient cooperation between the local body and the bicounty association and that the company was deriving little benefit from its membership in the association.

T. Edgar Reed was reelected president of the Herndon department; George F. Harrison was elected vice president, Howard M. Armfield, secretary; J. L. Nachman, treasurer; Walter A. Farr, fire chief; Thomas Groff, first assistant chief; Arnold Greear, second assistant chief; Charles Wilson, third assistant chief; L. H. Reed, fire marshal; Eustace Taylor, electrician; Roy Brumback, chaplain; L. L. Berger, lieutenant, and John Middleton, trustee for three years.

Report in Prince Georges On Trash Disposal Is Near

A list of ten sites suggested for the dumping of trash in Prince Georges County is expected to be embodied in a report to be returned early next week by a committee appointed to consider the disposal of trash in the county, Oliver Metzerott, chairman of the committee, said last night.

Other members of the committee are Prof. S. S. Steinberg, of the University of Maryland, and Robert P. Morse, chief engineer of the Suburban Sanitary Commission. If the sites for proposed dumps are on private property, permission of the owners for this use must, of course, be obtained, but this will be done before the report is brought in.

The committee is also considering the establishment of an incinerator by the sanitary commission, an act of the Legislature giving it this power. An incinerator, however, is extremely expensive, it has been found. Use of the dump would also provide employment for numbers of persons now jobless, as roads to the dumps have to be provided, and the dumps must be kept leveled off.

Mr. Metzerott called attention to a present law which makes it illegal to dump on public property, or on private property without the written consent of the owner.

ALEXANDRIA GROUP FAVORS 9 IN COUNCIL

Citizens Association Urges Birrell Bill Pending in Legislature.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Approval has been expressed by the Alexandria Citizens Association, whose members reside principally in the former town of Potomac, now the sixth ward of Alexandria, of the bill recently introduced by Delegate J. Fred Birrell in the State legislature proposing to amend the charter of Alexandria so as to provide for nine members of the city council, six to be elected from the six wards of the city and three at large, and also by the citizens of Rosemont, the latter having held a mass meeting Monday night to consider the matter.

The bill is being opposed by the Alexandria city council, the Chamber of Commerce and the Kiwanis Club. City Attorney Carl Budweskey attended the meeting of the Alexandria Citizens Association, held in the Potomac community hall Monday night, and stated that his objection to the Birrell bill, and his advice to the city council on the subject, was that the bill, from a legal point of view, might lead to litigation.

Capt. T. M. Hamilton stated that the last bond issue of the city, and probably all bond issues floated by the city council appeared to be illegal, and read a letter he had received from the attorney general of the State in support of his claim. Mr. Budweskey claimed that the section of the statute referred to by the attorney general referred to counties and not to cities of over 10,000 population.

E. E. Carver was elected president of the Citizens' Association for the ensuing year. Other officers chosen were: Mrs. M. R. Freeman, first vice president; C. L. Burgess, second vice president; R. G. Koiner, third vice president; Oliver P. Angelo, fourth vice president; Mrs. Naomi Craver, secretary, and Mrs. Mary B Dawkins, treasurer.

It is announced by the superintendent of schools of Alexandria that parents having children who will be 6 years old on or before February 1, 1932, may enroll them as follows:

White children who reside in the annexed territory may enroll at the George Mason High School today, tomorrow and Friday, from 9 a. m. to noon, and from 1 to 3 p. m. White children living in Alexandria proper may enroll in the office of the superintendent of schools, Jefferson School building, on the same days and same hours.

All colored children may enroll at the Parker-Gray School on the same days and at the same hours.

Birth cards for all beginners are required at the time of enrollment.

Peter Miller, colored, 45 years old, arraigned in Alexandria police court yesterday on a charge of stealing an overcoat from J. C. Penny Co., was sentenced by Judge William S. Snow to one year in jail.

Annandale Girl to Head Fairfax 4-H Council

Helen Webb, of Annandale, a junior in the Lee-Jackson High School, was elected president of the Fairfax County 4-H Club Council at its annual meeting in the schoolhouse at Fairfax, Va. Other officers are: Rebecca Myers, of Clifton, vice president; Bernice Riggles, of Clifton, secretary-treasurer, and Betty Brown, of Herndon, song leader.

Among the projects planned by the clubs are: An increase in the savings accounts of the individual members; a worth-while community project; a Washington program during the Bicentennial, and dress, health and growth projects. The annual club rally day is to be held on May 14.

RADIOS FOR COUNTY POLICE CARS URGED

Taking of Broadcasts From Capital Suggested in Prince Georges.

The proposal to equip Prince Georges County police cars with short-wave radios to receive broadcasts from the Washington Police Department will be considered by the county commissioners, they said yesterday after a salesman had broached the subject to them.

The salesman demonstrated a set costing $90 per car, and a representative of the Washington police force promised to send out broadcasts from the Washington station for the county cars. Chief J. J. Crowley introduced the salesman to the commissioners, but made no recommendations as to buying the sets.

Petitions asking the improvement of three roads were received by the commissioners who also referred to the Pennsylvania Railroad complaints about the State of two crossings in the county. A request for the improvement of the Ritchie station road was referred to the road committees of Kent and Spauldings districts, while a petition asking that the Bonini road be taken over by the State was filed by residents of the Oxon Hill district.

H. B. Contee and W. A. Watson, for persons living in Aquasco, asked that the road from that town to the Charles County line be improved. The crossings complained about were those at Duley and Selby Station, on the Pope's Creek branch.

Sheriff W. C. Hopkins presented a bill for $359 for returning two prisoners from Florida, but payment on this was held up while State's Attorney Alan Bowie tries to learn whether the State pays part of the cost of extraditing prisoners. This sum includes $144 charged by Florida authorities for feeding the two captives while waiting for county officials to come for them. The two men were wanted here for the theft of an automobile.

Raymond W. Bellamy, Federal director of unemployment in Maryland, told of the work being done in the upper part of the county where money being received from the Community Chest is used to pay men for cleaning up the county for the Bicentennial. Bellamy also said that the District is using Prince Georges County as a dump.

MacDonald to Rush Tariff for Britain

Will Not Attend Debt and Arms Parleys Until Program Passes.

London, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—With a bold front covering its cabinet split over the tariff issue, Ramsay MacDonald's national government will face parliament Tuesday determined to rush into legislation as quickly as possible financial measures providing for a general tariff.

The ministers expect to be subjected to a vote of censure, but with the Conservatives holding a clear majority of 325 in addition to the Liberal group and the few straggling Labor members who will support the government, no possibility of defeat is seen.

Prime Minister MacDonald has decided to devote his entire energies to the domestic situation for the time being.

There is no immediate prospect of his meeting Premier Pierre Laval of France, nor will he attend the opening of the world disarmament conference at Geneva. Instead he will wait until a definite program has been decided upon.

Voice of 'Justice' Holmes Heard by Proxy in House

Dissenting View on Barring Immigrants Because of Beliefs Is Quoted by Witness in Hearing Based Partly on Famous Schwimmer Case.

(Associated Press.)

The dissenting voice of Justice Holmes, now gone from the Supreme Court bench, was heard again by proxy yesterday in the House immigration committee.

The Griffin bill based partly on the Rosika Schwimmer case, to provide that religious views or philosophical opinions against war should not debar aliens, otherwise qualified, from citizenship, was under consideration.

Alfred Lief, young New York author, testifying in behalf of the bill, said he became interested in it when he was compiling his book, "The Dissenting Opinions of Justice Holmes."

"I was talking to him only yesterday," said Lief. "Justice Holmes chuckled and scoffed at the idea that admitting aliens opposed to war would undermine the foundations of American Government."

From his pocket Lief pulled a small piece of paper to read from it his notation of the exact words of Justice Holmes, now living in retirement at his home here:

"I never could take the objections seriously."

Lief read a lengthy list of "Finest Minds" agreeing, he said, with the dissenting voice of Justice Holmes on the Schwimmer case, and presented their letters for the record.

Among them were Dr. Mary E. Woolley, a member of the American delegation to the Geneva arms conference.

"If Prof. Albert Einstein wanted to become a United States citizen he could never be made one under our laws," said Lief. "Surely you would not pronounce him an undesirable, would you?"

In a green dress made spring-like by a white floral design, Rosika Schwimmer, sat calm and smiling through all the testimony about her case.

Next to her sat a woman of sharply opposing views, Mrs. Newbold Potts, of the National Patriotic Council, who has interrupted the last two women's peace mass meetings in Washington to voice her opinion against disarmament.

Occasionally the two chatted amiably together.

Rosika Schwimmer later said she enjoyed it all very much, and that she presented Mrs. Potts with a history of her case.

Many speakers from the Society of Friends urged passage of the bill. Its opponents will be heard today.

PARTY MALICE LAID TO HYDE BY GLASS

Virginian Again Disputes a Claim Post-War Loans Were Illegal.

(Associated Press.)

Senator Glass yesterday accused Secretary Hyde of "culpable pettifogging," and again disputed the Cabinet officer's claim that the Wilson administration's postarmistice loans to Europe were illegal.

The Virginia Democrat, who as a Secretary of the Treasury under Woodrow Wilson administered some of the two billions in loans to the allies, quoted from the language of the Liberty loan and Victory loan acts to prove there was authority for the advances.

Before an attentive chamber in which no response was made to his argument, Glass concluded, amid laughter, by likening the Secretary of Agriculture to a "turnip head."

He quoted the reasons given by the late Henry Arthur Jones, of Great Britain, for not pursuing an argument with H. G. Wells. In that statement by Jones, quoted by Glass, were the words:

Attack on Hyde.

"The round head waggled and shook with obstinate denial of fact and argument. I paused for a moment and looked at that round waggling head—by a sudden illumination I became aware that it was not a head at all, but a turnip, a veritable turnip placed on the top of his neck and shoulders."

The senator added: "As old Bishop John Early, of Virginia, used to say, the Senate 'may note the phraseology and make the application.'"

Hyde's charge was made in a recent address. Last week Glass denied the accusation in a Senate speech and the Secretary of Agriculture replied with a statement asserting, in part, that the Treasury had unsuccessfully sought authority from Congress to make the loans in question.

Glass yesterday quoted from the Victory loan act passed four months after the armistice giving authority to the Secretary of the Treasury to extend credits. He read a passage from the first Liberty loan act declaring foreign loans "shall cease upon the termination of the war."

Charges Partisan Malice.

He then quoted farther that "for the purposes of this act the date of the termination of the war between the United States and the imperial German government shall be fixed by proclamation of the President of the United States." That proclamation was issued by the late President Harding after the Wilson administration had been concluded.

"Secretary Hyde omits all reference to this pregnant provision of the various Liberty loan acts," said Glass, "including the Victory loan act, passed long after the armistice was signed. Thus he thinks that he has been enabled to deceive the public by this species of culpable pettifogging.

"It is to be hoped that not again soon, if ever, will there be a repetition of such a harsh and hateful exhibition of partisan malice to disturb the generous concord which has prevailed here in Washington since President Hoover appealed to his political adversaries to assist him in his efforts to relieve the unparalleled distress of the Nation."

Reed Upholds Glass In Position on Loans

Senator Glass last night made public a telegram sent him by former Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, regarding foreign loans made during the Wilson administration.

The telegram reads as follows: "So far as I recollect, my position always was that under the statute passed by Congress authorizing loans to foreign governments, they were to give us their bonds similar in all respects to bonds we issued to secure the money we turned over to them; that the claim was presented by foreign countries that they did not have time to issue their bonds and Mr. McAdoo accepted a written obligation that they would thereafter issue bonds. My recollection further is that my position always was that while this is a technical variation from the terms of the law, no particular criticism should be made of Mr. McAdoo because of the exigencies which existed."

$1,000 Is Reward In Waters Slaying

Five Men Paraded Before Clerk Probably Will Be Freed Today.

A reward of $1,000 was offered yesterday by the Montgomery County Commissioners for the arrest and conviction of the slayer or slayers of Horace D. Waters, 79-year-old, storekeeper of Old Germantown, Md., who was shot and fatally wounded last Wednesday by two colored holdup men.

One ray of hope was encountered by police yesterday when it was found that Richard A. Bennett, 68, clerk in the store, will be able to identify the murderer if he is caught. At first uncertain on this point, Mr. Bennett has shown by his comments on the men brought before him that he can identify the man, police say.

Five Negroes, paraded before Mr. Bennett yesterday by Sergt Roy Bodmer, of police headquaretrs at Rockville, probably will be released this morning. A sixth, Bud Prater, still is being held in the hope that the identity of three who were inquiring for him about 5 o'clock on the night of the murder can be located. Police are not satisfied that he has told all he knows about the affair.

2 Boys Play Hookey, Then Flee Results

The possibility of a "woodshed session" formed a mutual decision by Bertie Thompson and Ware Birkett to strike out for the city, after they were given notes by the teacher yesterday to bring home to their fathers.

Both had played "hookey" from the Oakton (Va.) School on Monday. The teacher gave them notes for their fathers. When last seen they were heading for Washington. So far the fathers haven't seen either their sons or the notes they were carrying. The notes also mentioned that the boys were backward in their school work.

Both are 13 years old. The Thompson boy lives at Oakton and his chum lives in Fairfax, Va.

Hearing Set Tomorrow For Alleged Attacker

A hearing will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in Marlboro on charges of assault preferred against Gus Chaconas, of Washington, by Olga Iglehart, also of Washington. Chaconas is being held without bail until the hearing.

According to the young woman, she went riding with Chaconas Monday night, when he is said to have stopped his car near Oxon Hill, Md. After resisting his advances, she said, he brought her back to Washington. She reported the incident to police, who notified Prince Georges County authorities, and Chaconas was arrested at his home early yesterday. He agreed to waive extradition and accompanied Maryland police to Marlboro.

BLOODSTAINS CLEW IN ILSLEY CASE QUIZ

Clothing of Quarry Worker Held in Dual Murder Will Be Tested.

Special to The Washington Post.

Middleburg, Va., Jan. 26.—A specimen of blood and the bloodstained clothes of Claude Furr, 53-year-old quarry worker of Mountville, Va., arrested yesterday by Loudoun County authorities in connection with the double murder of Mrs. Agnes Boeing Ilsley and her maid, Mrs. Mina Buckner, on January 13, will be sent to Washington tomorrow to be analyzed by Dr. Oscar B. Hunter, of 1885 I street northwest, a member of the staff of George Washington University Hospital.

Furr was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Paul Alexander on a warrant charging him with aiding and abetting in the double slaying, after a colored woman claimed he sent her a bloodstained shirt to be washed on the morning following the murder.

No explanation was given for the stained shirt. Furr told police and Commonwealth's Attorney John Gallaher that he was intoxicated on the night of the murder and could give no account of his whereabouts. It was learned, however, he had been seen on the streets of Middleburg in company with several colored men.

From the speciman of blood, Dr. Hunter will endeavor to determine whether the shirt was stained with Furr's blood or some one else's.

Meanwhile, George Crawford, colored, former convict and a discharged employe of the Ilsley family, continued to elude searchers. A lookout for his arrest was broadcast immediately after the bodies were found.

The reward for his arrest has been raised to $3,000 and 2,000 circulars bearing his picture and discription have been sent throughout the country.

Statement on Pictures Erroneously Attributed

Richmond, Va., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—The Associated Press incorrectly attributed to Robert Phillips, of the Washington Star, the statement that he felt he had a gentleman's agreement with John Boeing, giving the photographers permission to take pictures of the funeral procession in return for the agreement by photographers not to take flashlight pictures of Mrs. Ilsley's father.

The statement, quoted in connection with the report of T. McCall Frazier, director of the State division of motor vehicles on the arrest of several news photographers at Middleburg, should have been attributed to Dunbar Hare, of the Washington Times.

The Associated Press is glad to make this correction.

WEST VIRGINIA G.O.P. IS SOLID FOR HOOVER

Roosevelt Seems Choice of Democrats; Fight Looms in Governor Race.

Special to The Washington Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 26.—Political leaders of West Virginia seem to be most concerned at present over whom they will favor as candidates for the governorship.

As for the Presidency, Republicans of the State are said to be standing solidly for the renomination of President Hoover at the Chicago convention in June. Only the President's withdrawal, it is said, would cause the State's delegation to go to another candidate. Nineteen seats in the convention will be filled at the May primary election. It is not expected that there will be any candidates on the ticket who would declare themselves opposed to Mr. Hoover.

On the Democratic side, sentiment seems to be strong for Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, although there are some leaders who are favoring Newton D. Baker, of Cleveland, a native West Virginian. Several candidates of the party have announced themselves as convention delegates, but none of them has declared himself as being pledged to any candidate.

Lone Candidate.

Dr. J. W. Hartigan, of Morgantown, member of the State House of Delegates, is the lone announced candidate for the gubernatorial nomination. His candidacy is set in its incipiency and he has not as yet visited the political leaders in the Southern part of the State.

T. C. Townsend, State tax commissioner, who has been making a persistent fight for tax revision, particularly in behalf of a property classification and tax limitation amendment to the State constitution, has been boomed for the governorship by the Ogden chain of newspapers and others of the broad classification school of taxation.

Former Gov. Howard M. Gore, of Clarksburg, at present State commissioner of agriculture, has also been mentioned, but some of his friends say he will be a candidate for election to the position he now holds by appointment. He is serving the unexpired term of the late J. W. Smith, of Lewis County. Former Attorney General A. A. Lilly, of Beckley, has also been mentioned. He contested for the nomination in a hot campaign several years ago, but withdrew along with his chief opponent in the interests of party harmony.

Cornwell Move Renewed.

On the Democratic side, four candidates have made formal announcement of their candidacies for the nomination for governor and it is understood there will be several more. These four are J. Alfred Taylor, Fayetteville editor and speaker of the House of Delegates; A. J. Wilkinson, member of the House from Cabell County; Judge H. G. Kump, of Elkins, and Charles E. Hodges, of Morgantown, State senator and former editor of the Morgantown Dominion-News.

During the last week it is said several of the Democratic leaders were trying to "get together" and agree on a candidate. This is said to have revived a movement for former Gov. John J. Cornwell, of Romney, now of Baltimore, where he is general counsel for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co.

Mr. Cornwell has not denied publicly that he would be a candidate, but from reliable sources it has come repeatedly that he has told close friends he would not be a candidate under any circumstances.

Justice's Naming Approved in Senate

O'Donoghue Appointment to District Supreme Court Upheld.

The Senate late yesterday approved President Hoover's recess appointment of Daniel W. O'Donoghue to be associate justice of the District Supreme Court, without a dissenting voice.

Confirmation followed favorable report by the Blaine-King subcommittee of the Senate judiciary committee. John H. Adriaans, disbarred attorney, protested appointment of O'Donoghue at hearings a week ago, but the subcommittee after weighing evidence recommended his confirmation.

No action has been taken by the subcommittee on the recess appointment of F. Dickinson Letts to the District Supreme Court bench, although his confirmation is generally anticipated.

MEXICO REPUTEDLY EXPELS ARCHBISHOP

Churchman, Given Passport, Says He Is in U. S. Only on Visit.

Nogales, Ariz., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—The Archbishop of Guadalajara, Francisco Orozco y Jiminez, reported detained at Guadalajara, Jalisco, and later sent to an unnounced destination by airplane, appeared at the United States immigration office here today and asked for a six-month tourist passport.

The passport was granted and the archbishop said he intended to leave immediately for Los Angeles. He declined to see interviewers and sent word to them that he was in the United States only for a short visit.

The Herald said it had obtained semifficial information that the archbishop, central figure in the Mexican church embroglio, was expelled from Mexico. The newspaper said:

"The archbishop, according to reports, aroused the ire of former President Plutarco Elias Calles by scathing statements relating to the church-state quarrel and was given 24 hours to leave Mexico by President Pascual Ortiz Rubio. He obtained a private airplane and flew to the border, a distance of more than 1,000 miles.

"According to reports, plans were made in Mexico for the execution of the archbishop. President Rubio interceded, however, and compromised by giving the churchman a limited time in which to leave the country."

Two symphonies and the first presentation of an orchestral suite by a modern composer was the generous musical feast spread before an appreciative audience yesterday at the concert of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra in Constitution Hall.

The concert was given under the local management of the T. Arthur Smith Concert Bureau.

Bruno Walter, the noted German conductor, whose fame preceded him to the United States, led the orchestra through its comprehensive program. His leadership of the visiting aggregation yesterday justified the high praise given him in his previous appearances in this country. Sound musicianship, an ability to win thorough support from the members of the orchestra, and a scholarly reading of classic scores distinguished yesterday's program.

Haydn's splendid "Symphony in B-Flat Major" gave the orchestra its first opportunity to display its sterling qualities. All four of the movements were well treated and a balanced production of the entire composition added to the enjoyment of the audience. The adagio movement was received with the closest attention, but the other three met with applause also.

A "Suite from 'The Prodigal Son,'" by Prokofieff, had its first presentation in Washington and its five movements met with instant favor. Distinctly modern in treatment, the suite had many high musical moments in it and some of the melodies were memorable as well.

Brahms' ever beautiful "Symphony, No. 2, in D Major," was really the piece de resistance of yesterday's program. The New York Philharmonic Orchestra, under the command of Mr. Walter's vigorous and effective baton, presented it in a classic manner and an ensemble tone of unusual attractiveness. The four movements each had their adherents in the audience, especially the second one, "Adagio non troppo," and the spirited final movement, "Allegro con spirito."

"FOLKS you DON'T KNOW how LUCKY YOU ARE"

THINK . . . how justly she could say it! She and so many other pitifully helpless little children . . . crippled—ill—homeless—wholly dependent on charity. Living lives that would bring many tears to your eyes if you could see and understand. If sometimes they cry out—if things become unbearable even for their brave little hearts—who will fail to heed them? Who can turn his head and deny them the comforts a few dollars will provide? Easy enough to make excuse for yourself. Easy to complain that times are hard . . . but just one hour spent in a children's hospital . . . a day among these pitiful little humans would quickly banish such thoughts!

Culbertson on Contract

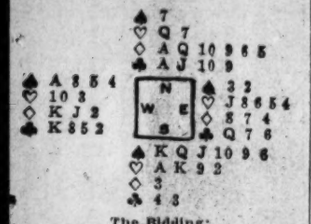
FITTING NONFITTING HANDS.

THE bugaboo of Contract play, as well as Contract bidding, is securing the best result on hands in which the holdings of the partners do not afford a perfect fit; that is, in a suit in which one of them is strong and the other is woefully weak. These hands usually result either in overbidding due to optimism or in underbidding because the responding hand lacks adequate support.

In the recent Vanderbilt Cup contest, Mrs. Courtland N. Smith, of New Jersey, playing the South hand below, was able to reach and make a small slam, even although her partner held but a singleton in the suit chosen as trump. The success of the contract depended upon daring and accurate play after the slam had been reached in the bidding.

South—Dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.



The Bidding:

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	3◇(1)	Pass
3♠(2)	Pass	4♣(3)	Pass
4♠(4)	Pass	5NT(5)	Pass
6♠(6)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—A forcing takeout. The hand contains more than three honor tricks and North is unwilling to play it short of game.

2—Showing rebid values in the spade suit in preference to showing a four-card heart suit.

3—Another biddable suit is shown.

4—Hopeful of slam, but wishing to leave the final decision to partner.

5—North knows that South must hold strength in hearts. Unwilling to bid the slam himself, he encourages it by the bid of five notrump.

6—Daring, but perhaps justified in tournament play.

In the play, West opened the ten of hearts. The opening lead was distinctly the worst that could have been made, although against any lead except a club Mrs. Smith must make her contract. This was won in Dummy with the Queen and a spade led which West won with his Ace. West then shifted to a club, but Mrs. Smith declined the club finesse, winning in the Dummy with the Ace, then led a small heart from the Dummy, finessing the nine, which held. The trumps were then drawn and now the success of the contract hinged entirely upon the diamond situation. After drawing the adverse trumps, the diamond 3 was led and the Queen finessed. This play, of course, risked the loss of an additional trick, but was the only way to make the contract. When the Queen held the trick, the losing club was discarded on the Ace, and thus the daring bidding of the player was rewarded.

TODAY'S POINTER.

Question: Name all honor combinations that are worth 1½ honor tricks.

Answer: A Q, A J 10, K Q J or K Q 10.

Indoor—Outdoor Gardens

OUR COMMONER HOUSE PLANTS.

THE following suggestions, if carefully adhered to, should lead to the successful growing of the plants mentioned.

Palms require fresh air at all times and their foliage must be sprayed at least once each week. They will thrive with little or no direct sunlight provided they have strong reflected light a portion of the time. They must never be overwatered.

Aspirations and sansevierias thrive under the most adverse conditions. These plants will stand almost any amount of dust and gas fumes and will also stand a great deal of dryness about the roots and in the air. The aspidistras will live in sunshine or shade. The sansevierias, while they do best in full sunlight, will live quite happily and even grow a little in a north window.

Rubber plants do well in moderate light but little sun, provided they are kept well watered. Extremes of moisture are likely to prove injurious to them.

Rex begonias do well in a rather low temperature, 55 degrees suits them quite well. Keep the soil about their roots moist but never wet.

Orange and lemon trees will live in the average living room if kept a trifle potbound and fed liberally to induce them to flower. They can be easily coaxed to flower, though they seldom bear fruit in the house.

They fail to mature fruit, due to the lack of direct sunlight. In the late fall they should have water partially withheld and must be kept cool so that they become sufficiently rested to develop growth and set buds before Easter. During their growing season water them every day.

Geraniums must be kept a trifle potbound if they are to produce a profusion of flowers. They must be kept in full sunlight, watered only every other day and be given no food. Food produces a soft foliage and no flowers.

Cacti, being natives of desert countries, withstand alternate drying and drenching. Never permit water to collect about the roots of these plants. They do best while making growth in strong sun. They demand a sandy soil and will stand some shade between periods of flowering.

Dare Interprets the Mode

Old gold lame (lah-may) and sable in an interesting three-way combination evening gown and wrap. (A Dah-ray design.)

THE combination dress is not to be spurned. Nay, the combination frock or outfit or dress has been with us many a year, but it is only since the "economy wave" has hit lovely ladydom that it has come right out in the open and shown its little face!

'Twas none other than Jeanne Lanvin herself who said, and continues to say, that one important detail on a dress is enough, and that all the rest of the garment must be subservient to this detail, thereby enhancing it. That means that if a dress has, we will say, an unusual skirt or hem-line or decoration, the rest of the dress must have no unusual or detracting lines or trimming or if the sleeves of a frock are unusual and important and perhaps very expensively embroidered or trimmed, the rest of the frock must be severely plain to frame these sleeves and to frame the wearer, too.

And, since it is this one detail that carries all the chic and elegance of the outfit, this detail usually is the most expensive part of the frock, nay, often worth much more than the whole rest of the outfit put together.

Doesn't that give you an idea? It did and still does give the most famous European elegants ideas, and their couturieres!

Think you that Miladi Elegante, no matter on whose millions, no matter whether these be rubles or kronins, or francs, or dollars, keeps a silver fox farm to supply her with all the silver fox pelts she needs to trim all her various tailleurs, gowns, coats and negligees? Not a bit of it! Her silver fox pelts are an investment, and she and her dressmaker conspire to get the most possible wear out of them! So-o-o-o-o, though Miladi Elegante may have a silver fox or two or six whenever she needs them, they are the same ones all the time!

These are secrets of the Haute Nobility, dahr-lings, and my life isn't worth a million ruble paper note for telling you, but I must be tru-u-u-ue to my dear public to death!

And there, to better illustrate what I mean by the elegance and accepted chic of combination outfits, is sketched a design I have made for you. Nor is it a most exclusive idea, for similar combinations are in all of the collections of the Haute Couture. Mine may have a bit of originality, though—and the facts of the matter are that a lovely old-gold blonde type, or a demiblonde with blond hair and brown eyes had this frock made for her in an expensive and flattering old gold lame—frock on straight and svelt and elegant lines. And that with this frock were matching gold lame (lahmay) sleeves, lined in transparent silk gauze which shows the wrong side of the lame though most effectively, and these sleeves were banded at the top with expensive sable. And the sleeves have fastenings which make of them a cape-wrap, which she wears either as a wrap or as both—meaning as a wrap which she removes and snaps on for sleeves, or as a wrap which she does not utilize for sleeves.

And then for a change of frock and mood, the "sleeves" become a peplum which completely changes the lines of her frock, when it is fastened around her waist or lower on the hips. And that, my darlings, is a "combination" frock for you!

From million-dollar evening gowns, sable trimmed, to the two house aprons you can make for les sthan 30 cents by just sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Post. That's the way we go, because we or our maids, if we are lucky enough to have some, are always in need of the right kind of an apron or aprons, what? And while experimenting with cheap materials to most easily and "fittingly" make two different versions of house aprons—one that fits and has chic and comfort and a double front effect, using both fronts before the apron goes to the washtub; and another that has chic and fit and comfort and a genius for staying on, well, I just discovered that unbleached muslin was marvelous for house aprons! And that it washed, ironed like magic and could be dyed. Well, better just send for that leaflet which tells you all about it!

Au Revoir!

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

DEMENTIA PRECOX.

DR. M. BLEULER, presumably a relative of the man who contributed so much to our knowledge of mental disorders, has undertaken to discover the facts about the inheritability of one kind of insanity. The kind he studied is dementia precox. In this investigation he made use of American institution and family histories, and these he compared with similar records from several parts of Europe. He did not discover very much, for the difficulties are great.

The inheritance of mental and personality characteristics is very complicated and rarely or never follows Mendelian law. It is as though all the elements that go to make up the new individuals were molten material in a great vat. Into this vat every ancestor pours a part of himself. The mixture is not stirred much. When a new individual is to be poured a faucet is turned and the molten material flows into the mold. What flows in may be all from one ancestor, or it may be from several, in varying proportions.

Or, the materials in the vat may have acted on each other to make something with new characteristics, as chemicals are liable to do.

It is rather generally accepted that dementia precox, of all forms of insanity, is that one which is most apt to be inherited. Dr. Bleuler finds that it is not very inheritable. If a person has dementia precox, there is about one chance in twenty that a brother or other very close relative will be found also to have it. He found some evidence that this mental disorder runs in families. There is a larger proportion of cases in certain families than in the general population.

Dementia precox is generally regarded as a later chapter in a serial. In childhood a child does not play with other children but herds to himself. In school he reads rather than plays. A little later he behaves in a way that makes people say he is peculiar or distant, or of a "shut-in" type. Dr. Blueler tried to determine just the relationship of this type of behavior to dementia precox, but without reaching a very definite conclusion.

Rarely do we find an individual who follows the type exactly. There is mixed in with his personality some characteristics that do not fit into the type. That was one difficulty encountered by the investigator. A second was our skimpy knowledge of the people we are studying. As a rule, mental specialists draw their conclusions from reports made by social workers after a half hour interview, or some similar period of observation. What he should have is the daily observation by a mother who knows something about personality and behavior.

And, finally, the investigator was handicapped by lack of an exact conception of what dementia precox is. He did find that some of the cases of it had symptoms that followed exactly in a groove.

COCOA IN MILK SHAKE.

C. writes: Please outline the benefits and detriments in cocoa in sufficient quantity to flavor one glass of milk shake daily.

REPLY.

Cocoa contains a small quantity of an alkaloid which corresponds to caffein. It also contains oxalic acid, or its equivalent. Taken in quantities, it is objectionable for the same reasons that coffee in excess is. People who are subject to oxalate kidney stones, gravel and oxalurio should avoid it. The amount you mention should be permissible to all except young children and those subject to oxaluria.

EYES CHANGE COLOR.

Miss B. M. writes: When I was a child I had light brown hair and light blue eyes. When I reached the age of 15 years my hair and eyes turned darker. Is that due to a physical condition or a mental reaction?

REPLY.

Physical is my guess. In our journey from the cradle to the grave our eyes are likely to change color at least once. Our hair may change color, or shade, several times.

What Today Means to You

"AQUARIUS."

IF January 27 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11 a. m. to 12:45 p. m., from 5:30 p. m. to 7 p. m. and from 10:45 p. m. to midnight. The danger periods are from 9 a. m. to 10:30 a. m. and from 2 p. m. to 4 p. m.

A day of unrest and change is predicted for January 27, and much travelling will be a feature of the day. No risky investments should be made, and only "gilt-edge" securities should be taken for money loans. Young people will find it difficult to concentrate on anything.

The child born on this January 27 will have a sensitive nature, and will suffer unconsciously from phases of inferiority complex. It will be active and lethargic by turns, according to its moods. It will suffer silent yearnings and will not make a sufficient fight for the things which it really desires.

Born January 27, you are probably a man or woman destined for distinction who has missed it; you seem always to be riding through life for a fall. You are intelligent, easygoing and well informed. You transact your affairs with a lazy good nature which shows your complete grasp of the situation. You are too calm and placid to ever find yourself in a whirl of work. You would pass a high mental or physical test. You would not receive a low rating for an intelligence test. You are a high-class worker, but your talents and skill will probably always be wasted on mediocre things in mediocre places. That you are not nearer to the top than you are is due to both the tricks of Fate and to something lacking in your "make-up." You do not seem able to pull the right strings, or to place yourself where you belong. It is not for want of trying, but more to a kindness in respect to opportunities and to lack of push at the right time.

Life will never deliver any fatal blows to your spirits, and you will smile through success and failure alike. You make a cheery, unselfish and interesting companion, and you will be a favorite in your special "set."

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

LONG ENGAGEMENTS.

DEAR FRANCES McDONALD: What is the matter with me? For three years I have been engaged to the finest man that ever lived. I have sense enough to at least know that. When I am rational. But of late, the past year or more, there are times when to say that he gets on my nerves is putting it most mildly. I simply can not stand him. For weeks at a time I will not even see him. My family and his think me terrible and I know that I am. And I am always seized with compunction for my meanness and then we make up, and for months or certainly weeks I adore him as he deserves to be adored. Then I turn mean again, go out with some one else, or anything I please. I do not go with others to make him jealous, for, honestly, at such times I never give him a thought. I do not care, do not know he is on earth.

The past 30 days I have been so hateful that my mother insists I break our engagement, as she says the situation will destroy my sense of what is due another human being as such. Is she right? The thought of going on without the one who is at times the one and only, seems utterly terrible to me. Am I crazy? Would I be an abominable wife? Do I love the man at all? If not, why am I crazy about him sometimes? I certainly can not bear the thought of some other woman having him? Is that merely catty? I agree with mother that this should end. He believes in me and wants to get married before everything is spoiled. Would any one dare marry in such doubt. ESTHER.

You love the man. But like most normally constituted women you find such a long engagement a severe strain on your emotions—hence these upheavals, and your unconscious resentment toward him as the unacknowledged source of your irritation. People were never meant to spend years and years in semiunion. That is not nature's idea at all. And you may be sure that the man is as much disconcerted as you are—and more. Your mother senses this. And you should by all means end what is a most trying situation before your nerves snap in protest. But I suggest that you marry instead of breaking your engagement. There is no doubt about your love. You simply do not understand your own emotional makeup. Married you will be perfectly happy. Read Lawrence's book "Women in Love." It is exaggerated but tells the tale. May all happiness attend you—as it will!

Urges Montgomery Pupils to Take Interest in Competition.

tion of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission.

The specimen essay printed today was written on the "Washington at War" and contains many interesting facts on this phase of Washington's career.

WASHINGTON AT WAR.

By ——.

"Washington was first in war. During the Revolution the Germans at Trenton had been having a jolly Christmas and had gone to bed suspecting no danger. Suddenly, Washington with his men rushed into the little town and captured a thousand German soldiers. It was all done so quickly that the men found themselves prisoners almost before they knew what had happened. The rest of the Germans escaped to tell Lord Cornwallis how the Americans had beaten them.

"Washington's army consisted of men who came from all parts of the country to join the Continental Army. Many of them were sharpshooters. In one case an officer set up a board with a figure of a man's nose chalked on it for a mouth. A hundred men fired at it long distance and 60 hit the nose.

Could Not Get Ammunition.

"Washington wanted to drive Gen. Gage and the British soldiers out of Boston, but for months he could not get either cannon or powder. Benjamin Franklin said that we would have to fight with bows and arrows.

"Before the Revolution began Gen. Braddock, a noted British soldier, was sent over to Virginia by the king to drive the French out of the country. He started with a fine army and Washington went with him. He told Gen. Braddock that the French and the Indians would hide in the woods and fire at his men from behind the trees. But Braddock paid no attention to the warning.

"On his way through the woods the brave English general was suddenly struck down by an enemy. Half of his army was killed.

Three of His Horses Killed.

"I think that Washington had three horses shot from under him and five bullets went through his coat. It was a very close shave for the young man. One of the men who did not get killed said 'I expected every moment to see him fall, but he was to live for greater work.' And the man spoke the truth.

"One night I heard over the radio a story of Gen. Braddock's defeat. First it told of Gen. Braddock in camp, talking with his faithful servant, Jasper. He said, 'Do you think we will beat them tomorrow?' The servant said, 'we ought to, we have more men than they have.' Just then Washington came running in. He said, 'General, let me go to the fight tomorrow. I am well now.' The general said, 'No, not in the condition you are in now. You can't go through with it.' Washington said, 'Oh, please, general, I can fight.' Finally the general said, 'Alright,' but he told Jasper to watch Washington carefully. The next day came and the army was marching to the fight. Washington told the general that the Indians would fight from behind trees and kill them all, but the general would not listen to him. During the fight Gen. Braddock was shot down and killed, but before he died he called Washington to his side and said, 'If I had listened to you this would not have happened.'"

PLEA FOR HARMONY IS MADE BY STONE

Farm Council, in Convention, Hears Federal Board Heartily Defended.

A plea for harmony among farmers' cooperative associations so as to make common cause to fight interests seeking to destroy the Farm Board and cripple the cooperative movement, was made yesterday by Chairman Stone, of the Federal Farm Board, at a meeting of the National Cooperative Council, in the Willard Hotel.

The opposition that is seeking to kill the cooperative movement, he said, is directing its fire at the Farm Board; but "we are not its real objective. That objective is to prevent farmers organizing effectively so as to handle their own business."

The opposition, he said, has its seat in the grain, cotton, wool, live stock and produce exchanges and is carried back to the "grass roots" by buyers "who are trying to poison the minds of farmers and local business men against cooperative marketing by blaming the Farm Board and the agricultural marketing act for everything that has happened in the past two and a half years."

"It is flooding the country, particularly the rural districts with false or misleading statements, carrying on an insidious propaganda that organized agriculture must meet if the ground gained is to be held and future progress is to be made," he said.

The Farm Board, he said, has been blamed for the present world-wide depression, the Treasury deficit, and has been accused of having put the Government in business. "If all our outstanding loans were liquidated today, the losses, notwithstanding present prices of agricultural commodities, would not exceed $250,000,000, or a yearly average of $83,334,000 for the past three years. To my mind that would be a mighty small drain upon the Federal Treasury, considering the benefits to organized agriculture, other farmers, and the country generally," he said.

Chairman Stone called attention "to the fact that some of those who in recent months have demanded loudest that the Government be taken out of business, so far as the farmer is concerned were shouting ever more vociferously in behalf of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation law so that they could have the use of some Government money."

In opening the conference, C. O. Moser, president of the council, said the "recovery of international trade is essential to American Agricultural prosperity," and downward revision of reparations is one means toward that end.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

YOU are going to like this lad when he comes to the Fox Theater Friday for a week of personal appearances. You are going to like his unassuming frankness; you are going to like his enthusiasm and spontaneity and the way his eyes snap and crackle when he smiles through two rows of white, even teeth. Whether or not you are going to like him when he sings, I can not say, because at the moment he is wrestling with a stubborn attack of laryngitis and has had to delete the two songs from his act. That, however, probably will be over with by the time he reaches here via Pennsylvania Railroad Friday morning at 11:30.

James Dunn.

Of course, it is James Dunn, who has come to the top in pictures in a mere matter of months, of whom I am speaking. Four pictures did it—"Bad Girl," "Sob Sister," "Over the Hill" and "Dance Team"—and now Jimmie's tour of personal appearances (it seems perfectly natural to call him Jimmie five minutes after you've met him), only now in its fourth week, is demonstrating something else about him and his hold on the interest of the public.

It is being made evident everywhere he appears that he is bringing back to the picture houses great flocks of youngsters ranging between the ages of 10 and 20 who have not been conspicuous around stage entrances since the days when such favorites as Harold Lockwood, Wallie Reid and Valentino had their tremendous followings and were the recognized idols of the picture fans. Jimmie Dunn comes nearer fitting into the niche with these three than anyone else on the screen today.

During a visit of something more than an hour with him in his dressing room at the Fox Theater in Philadelphia yesterday afternoon, the reasons for all this became immediately apparent.

Of the many screen players I have met since the present prevalence of personal appearances set in, Jimmie Dunn has "gone Hollywood" least of all. In fact, he has not gone Hollywood at all, but is just a happy youngster who can not yet quite grasp how he got up there so soon or why his lucky star should so suddenly have asserted itself after having exerted so negligible an influence on his professional career for so long. He makes no secret of the fact that at the time he was given his first screen test he was so desperately in need of work that he was grabbing at straws right and left. There is an interesting yarn about that screen test.

IT was Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, I am given to understand, who first engaged the youthful Mr. Dunn—all right, then, he is 27, if you must know—for a screen test, but having no Eastern studio borrowed the Fox facilities in New York for the purpose, as they had done many times before and probably have done many times since—or maybe not, now that I think of it! Winfield R. Sheehan, then Fox production manager, happened to catch a few rushes in the projection room and forthwith got hold of this James Dunn person and pledged him to first chance in case M-G-M failed to exercise their option. M-G-M failed and both of the Messrs. Sheehan and Dunn kept their words.

It is my own sneaking suspicion that Winne Sheehan may have sent all the bad shots of Jimmie back to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and kept the good ones for himself! I said suspicion—you can't sue me for that!

Anyhow, Jimmie got the job on a basis of railroad fare to the West Coast and $50 per week, pending the outcome of his first picture. A hit and they would talk contract; a flop, railroad fare back to New York and that would be that. You know the answer as well as I do.

Jimmie was born in New York City, but moved to New Rochelle at a sufficiently early age to grow up with the youngsters of the Foy family—the numerous progeny of the late Eddie Foy, one of the stage's supreme clowns. It is to this association that Jimmie attributes his first ambition to become an actor. The yen for the stage was more or less ingrained in his nature by the close contact with the comedian's famous family, whom he looks upon still as almost brothers and sisters.

There is an admirable sense of loyalty in this young fellow that keeps cropping out continually. His close friends in Hollywood he can number on the fingers of one hand and all date far back into the pre-picture days. One or two are affiliated with the profession, but none in the capacity of actor.

JAMES DUNN, I gather, has been broke often and long enough in his vaudeville and stage career to have a keen appreciation of the value of thrift and of safeguarding those qualities that have spelled his screen success. So you probably will not see a great deal of him in public places—barring the theater, of course—during his week at the Fox. After four performances a day, he is considerably more sold on hitting the hay than on hitting the high spots. He has some shopping to do when he gets here and you might catch a glimpse of him in some smart shop, but not very likely around the night clubs.

In Hollywood he lives simply with his mother in a rented apartment, enthusiastically eschewing the traditional hilltop palace with a swimming pool the size of Lake Erie dug out in the back yard.

In all that he says and does Jimmie gives the impression of being a wholly natural and unspoiled youngster delighted at the turn of the tide in his favor, but still a little bewildered at having been so suddenly skyrocketed into stardom and just a little at a loss as to how to account for it. Not anything approaching a deliberate naivete, you understand, but an utterly charming and disarming emancipation from any suggestion of high-hat or delusions of grandeur that is so genuine that you are immediately drawn to him as one a little apart from the typical actor.

This is a quality that quickly communicates itself across the footlights. Jimmie achieves in 11 minutes, the present running time of his act, what many another could not accomplish in that many hours. Laryngitis, as I have said, clipped the songs out of his turn yesterday, but I asked him about his voice, anyway.

"I don't know what it is," he replied. "As a matter of fact, I don't think it is anything much. I can read music a bit, but have never had a voice lesson and so just get out there and sing. I've done it before and so far nobody has thrown anything at me. That is, nothing hard!"

Although the piece folded before reaching Washington, you no doubt recall that Jimmie's last stage engagement prior to his "discovery" in pictures was in "Sweet Adeline," with Helen Morgan, Irene Franklin, Charles Butterworth and Jim Thornton. Oddly enough, Jim Thornton, the oldest member of the troupe was Jimmie's pal throughout the run of the musical comedy of those gay 90's.

THERE is still a possibility that Jimmie Dunn and Janet Gaynor will be teamed in a picture, although that arrangement is distinctly tentative. The greater likelihood seems to be that he will return shortly to the Fox lot to appear in "Little Teacher" with Marian Nixon.

After the week in Washington, another follows at the Fox Theater in Brooklyn, after which Mr. Dunn has a serious present intention of dashing away to Lake Placid for two weeks of absolute rest, although he adds that probably what really will happen will be that some more theaters will offer him bookings and he will accept them. Since this excursion into the living theater is apart from his Fox contract, all that extra money doesn't look so bad!

And if you think the current salary remains at that original 50 smackers a week, you are non compos mentis, or e pluribus unum, or something!

When you see him in the flesh you will find that Jimmie Dunn looks just as he looks. I mean to say, he is about 5 feet 10 or 11 inches tall, erect and carrying no extra poundage, blonde, with regular features—that light up like a mazda when he unfurls that smile—and altogether a pretty swell fellow.

Come to think of it, it wasn't in Jimmie's dressing room at all that Lou Brown and I parked. It was in Max Bradfield's, the musical director's. Jimmie's was already full of friends when we got there.

As I said 'way up north there at the beginning of this screed, you are going to like this lad. Everybody does.

Your gas water heater is on, let us say, operating steadily, and you light your gas range to prepare dinner. That demands more gas from the pipe which a moment ago was carrying just enough for the water heater alone.

Never fear, it will be there—plenty of it, at ample pressure to give you the heat you want. A little device you may never see—a governor control—takes care of that for you.

Somewhere near your home is a big gas transmission line which feeds the gas main leading to your house. At the junction is a governor valve, allowing just enough gas to pass through it to meet the demands you put on your main.

But you need that gas at ample pressure to give you a big enough flame so that it won't take all evening to cook dinner. The moment you light your gas range the control knows it, and in mechanical language orders the governor to open a little wider and give you the gas for your range at the pressure you need.

These governors and controls are a new addition to your gas system. They are one of the many ways we have modernized that system to assure you all the gas you want, whenever you want it, at a pressure sufficient to do the job you have in hand.

JACOBS "STEALS SHOW" IN ALEXANDRIA FIGHTS

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

ONE of Washington's native sons has serious designs on a berth with the United States Olympic boxing team which will meet the champions of a score of other nations in the 1932 renewal of the old Greek games at Los Angeles in June.

Bobby Goldstein is the lad who is eager to carry Washington's banner into the Olympics and has mapped out a deliberate campaign to that end. He is taking a course in the liberal arts at the University of Virginia, but has already received a liberal education in the art of self-defense, as they called it after Gentleman Jim Corbett stood off Big John L. Sullivan for twenty rounds and then knocked him out in the twenty-first.

Young Bobby has already brought considerable fame to his alma mater and now in the midst of his junior year boasts a record free from defeat in collegiate boxing. He has won twenty fights, more than half by knockouts, and last year brought to the University of Virginia the featherweight championship of the Southern Conference. His most recent bout, last Saturday, saw him knock out his opponent in half a round.

Bobby aspires to the Southern Conference championship again, which will be his stepping stone into the intercollegiate championship to be staged at Penn State College April 8 and 9. The intercollegiate title, if he acquires it, will qualify him to compete in the tryouts for the United States Olympic team at Chicago later in the month.

The Chicago tryouts promise to be America's greatest carnival of amateur boxing. Selected to compete will be the winners of the intercollegiate tournament and the runners-up, the winners of the national Amateur Athletic Union tournament, and the winners of the Army and Navy elimination tournaments. The survivors of the grand elimination at Chicago will be selected to represent the United States against the amateur boxers of the world at Chicago.

Young Goldstein is not placing his Olympic hopes in the intercollegiate tournament alone for if he repeats his Southern Conference championship, as is indicated, he will be entitled to compete in the national A. A. U. tournament, in which he fought last year, thus having two chances to gain an Olympic trial.

Young Bobby was to boxing born, almost. His brother, Goldie Ahearn, who came back to Washington as featherweight champion of the A. E. F. in France, took the boy in hand in his early teens and has carefully guided his destinies in the ring through the years. The youngster learned readily and was a finished boxer, as amateur boxers go, before he entered the University of Virginia.

Bobby learned to accept adversity early in his boxing career although the lesson came vicariously. His pride in his brother, Goldie, underwent a terrific shock back in 1926 when Bobby was a lad of 14. It was at Kenilworth that Goldie, weakened by the body punches of Al Foreman, dropped his guard ever so slightly and was knocked out with a punch on the chin in the first round. So Bobby learned that he should never drop his guard.

During his three years at Virginia, Bobby has outclassed his opposition, winning every decision by a wide margin whenever he failed to knock his man out. He is now fighting at 129 pounds in the featherweight class but will be forced to enter the Olympic tryouts as a lightweight, owing to the allowance of only a half pound over the 125-pound limit in the featherweight class. Collegiate boxing permits a four-pound leeway.

Bobby made a bid for the national A. A. U. title last year in the lightweight class and was the sensation of the tournament at New York until he was beaten in an extra round in the semifinals. In that bout he was forced to concede six pounds. The decision against Bobby was not unanimous.

He is an honor student at Virginia.

Legalized Strangle Gives Londos Verdict

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Jan. 26.—Using a legalized strangle hold, known as the "unconscious" hold, Champion Jim Londos tonight again disposed of Ray Steel, this time giving the 5,000 fans at Carlin's Arena a little longer run for their money. The official time was 53½ minutes, the bout being a thriller from start to finish.

Columbus Boasts Two Boxing Stars

Marmel, O'Connor Expected to Shine Against W. & J. Here February 4.

Two standouts will be sent into action against Washington and Jefferson's pugilistic "Presidents" at the Strand Theater February 4 when Columbus University inaugurates its home schedule here. While the team, in its entirety appears exceptionally formidable, most stress will be placed upon Eddie Marmal, 118-pounder, and "Mickey" O'Connor, 1930 District amateur middleweight champion.

Formerly affiliated with the ring team of New York University, Marmal differs greatly from O'Connor, his teammate. Whereas the latter possesses sleep producing punches in both hands, Marmal depends upon boxing and science to get him by.

When their school relinquished a 3 to 2 verdict to City College of New York in Gotham recently, Marmal and O'Connor single-handedly put over the Columbus wins.

Athletic books necesary for admission to the home boxing schedule have been placed on sale at Goldie Ahearn's, Vic Sport Shop and Spalding's.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

UNLEASHING an attack of almost preposterous long shots, Tech High gained the twofold satisfaction of taking first place in the high school series and defeating Business High yesterday afternoon before a gallery of 1,500 at Tech, 30 to 24. In the second game of the day, Central showed incontestable power in handing Western that team's fifth consecutive series loss, 38 to 24.

Tech's victory over the team which defeated it, 28 to 27, in the first game of the series, once more caused the youngsters and oldsters in attendance to stand on their ears. It was a game that started out a gentle and uninteresting zephyr and ended a howling tornado.

Business Plays Masterful Game.

Business, playing a masterful game despite the absence of Joe Sherman in center, held Tech to 12 ignominious points until four minutes of the last quarter had drifted away. While Tech was being checked on all sides by alert interceptions and splendid guarding, the Stenogs sent cheer after cheer ringing up to the roof by dashing offensive play.

Carroll Shore, Business forward, was a young demon. After putting Business into the lead, 10 to 8, at the end of the first half, Shore personally boosted the score to 17 to 8 in his side's favor at the beginning of the third quarter's hostilities, winging in three field goals from impossible positions and scoring once from the foul line. He scored two more points from the foul stripe before the quarter ended, and Business led, 21 to 12.

Business was confident at the start of the last quarter, and Tech showed little hope of improving. The teams traded two baskets and two foul shots, for 24 to 15, and there were but six minutes left of the game.

Russell Cracks Business' Spell.

Everett Russell, Tech's acting captain and the greatest money player the high schools have had in a decade, cracked the Business spell with three minutes left of the game. Business had been freezing the ball when Russell snared a pass in midcourt and let fly. He had been missing his shots up to this point, but not now. The ball, arched almost up to the rafters, and swished down through the cords. On top of this Russell plunked two fouls shots in and then another extraordinary long shot. The score was 24-21 in Business' favor.

But Russell's hot hand was contagious. Gregorio, a substitute for Reichardt, dropped in one from the middle of the floor and Thomas did the same, giving Tech a 25-24 lead, and an undying reputation for coming through on long shots in a pinch. Tech could not be stopped. Waverly Wheeler looped in a one-handed shot from the side, Reed shot a foul and Wheeler added two more fouls before the gun ended the game. It was a hair-raising climax if ever there was one.

Central passed and shot rings around Western's uncertain players. The well-coached Blue and White squad performed tricks with the ball that left Western's defense standing army-footed on the sidelines. Billy Burke took second place among the series scorers by accounting for twelve points. Buddy Nau led the passing attack, giving an exhibition of ball hurling not seen since Jack

Gar Wood Postpones Speedboat Mark Trial

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—High winds today caused Gar Wood, veteran speedboat driver, to postpone his scheduled attempt to break the world's speedboat record of 110.228 miles an hour.

He called off the trial after learning an east-southeast wind of fourteen miles an hour was blowing across the course and that there was no assurance from the Weather Bureau of an immediate decrease in its velocity.

2 Deaths Cause Delay Of International Polo

Pinehurst, N. C., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Death struck twice to cause postponement today of the final game between the American and British teams at the Sand Hills Polo Club. George P. Hawes, father of Col. G. P. Hawes, who is refereeing the matches, died here last night and news was received of the death of the father-in-law of Verner Z. Reed, of the American team, in Washington.

BAER READY TO BATTLE LEVINSKY

Old Fear of Killing Rival Conquered, Says Californian.

ORANGEBURG, N. Y., Jan. 26 (U.P.).—Max Baer, California heavyweight, has conquered his fear of killing another man in the ring, he said today, and he will meet King Levinsky, of Chicago, at Madison Square Garden, New York City, Friday night, without thought of pulling his punches.

Baer, who is training for the fight at Gus Wilson's camp here, explained that fear has been his worst opponent, not only in the ring, but all of his 22 years.

Campbell's Death Brought Back Old Fear.

"Something always seemed to happen to make me afraid," he admitted. "Even since I was a kid, it's been the same way. I was afraid of this and afraid of that. Just when I was getting confidence in the ring, Frankie Campbell died in San Francisco after a fight with me. It's been hard to get over that, but I've finally done it."

In August, 1930, Baer stood at a grave in San Francisco beside Campbell's weeping widow. Cold sweat dripped down his white face as the first shovelful of dirt thudded on the coffin. He vowed then never to enter the ring again.

After a grand jury refused to indict him for Campbell's death, his friends induced him to continue in the game. Since then Max has been only moderately successful. Although a terrific hitter during the heat of battle, he unconsciously let up when his foe was weak and helpless.

Now Realizes Knockouts All Part of Game.

"Whenever I got a man groggy," Baer explained today, "I remembered poor Frankie Campbell hanging on the ropes and me whanging away at his head. I was always afraid the other fellow would slump to the floor and die. I couldn't knock him out unless I got him on the button when he was in good shape.

"But in the last couple of months I've done a lot of thinkin', and I realize it's all part of the game. I feel now that Campbell's death was just an accident, as if I had hit him unavoidably with an automobile. It doesn't bother me any more, and I'll knock out Levinsky without any worry at all."

59 Nominations For $15,000 Dixie

Mate, Equipoise, Spinach, Sun Meadow Among Good Field Named for May 7.

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 26.—Forty thoroughbred owners made 59 nominations for this year's renewal of the $15,000 Dixie Stakes, which will be run at Pimlico on Saturday, May 7. A year ago the same number of owners nominated 70 horses, but of that number only ten went to the post, so it is probable that in the neighborhood of a dozen will be seen in action again this season. The race is at a mile and three-sixteenths and the Maryland Jockey Club adds $15,000.

Many of the best handicap thoroughbreds have been nominated for the Dixie, which is the first large stake for 3-year-olds and up during the spring season. Among the likely starters will be A. C. Bostwick's Mate, winner of the $50,000 Preakness last spring; C. V. Whitney's Equipoise, which will attempt a comeback after going wrong at Havre de Grace last spring; Mrs. K. E. Hitt's Sun Meadow which could not defeat Twenty Grand last year and which ran a number of creditable races; William Zeigler, jr.'s, Spinach, which was a sensation as a 3-year-old in 1930; the Northway Stable's Plucky Play, which won a stake at Bowie and which is in training for the Agua Caliente Handicap; William du Pont's White Clover II., which missed winning two stakes at Bowie last fall; M. L. Schwartz's Clock Tower, which found himself in Maryland last fall, and others.

BATTALINO'S CROWN AT STAKE

Champion Says He Will Make Weight for Miller Tonight.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Bat Battalino, featherweight king, scheduled for ten rounds here tomorrow night with Freddie Miller, Cincinnati, today said he had no intention of losing his National Boxing Association title on the scales. If he is dethroned it will be in the ring.

The New York State Athletic Commission recently stripped Battalino of his crown for failure to make the weight limit in a title argument with Lew Feldman.

Battalino was reported to weigh 136 pounds when he came here a week ago from his Hartford, Conn., home. His trainer, Leonard Murullo, said Bat weighed 128 this morning.

Defeat Miller Last Year.

Miller was badly beaten by Battalino here last summer.

The fight tomorrow is billed as a title affair. The National Boxing Association required both men to post $1,000 forfeits that they would weigh 126 pounds, the class limit. Battalino was given permission to box in case he did not tip scales any higher than 131 pounds.

If Battalino is over 131 the National Boxing Association said it would declare the title vacant.

Fleming's Retention At Army Is Confirmed

West Point, N. Y., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Definite word was received today that Maj. Philip B. Fleming, graduate manager of athletics at the Military Academy, would be assigned to West Point for another year.

The major was to have been relieved this June for other duties, his place to be taken by Capt. Lawrence (Biff) Jones. The transfer of Capt. Jones to Louisiana State University, where he will coach football, removed that possibility and the decision to continue Maj. Fleming here was made.

Old Line Five Again Beats V. M. I.

Berger, Ronkin, Vincent Star in 43-28 Victory.

Maryland Is Never Headed After Gaining Early Lead.

UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND basket ball quint, titleholders last year, continued along the Southern Conference championship trail last night by overcoming Virginia Military Institute, 38-20, in Ritchie Coliseum. In winning over the Cadets, the Old Liners rang up their fourth conference victory in as many games. It was the second win over the Flying Squadron this season, Maryland having defeated V. M. I. at Lexington, 43 to 28.

Coach Burton Shipley used his entire squad tonight, ten players getting into the contest. Bozi Berger, all-American guard, was the ace of the team's attack, sinking six court goals and a foul toss for 13 points. Rufus Vincent, sophomore center, was second high scorer with 8 points.

Visitors Rush Into Early Lead.

The visitors got under way with a rush and took a 3 to 0 lead in the first few minutes on a pot shot and a foul by Cy Mergenhagen, big center. The Old Liners quickly knotted the count on Berger's 2-pointer and Ronkin's foul shot.

After six minutes, Maryland went ahead at 4-3 on another free toss by Ronkin and thereafter was never headed, although the Cadets again tied it up at 7-all.

Play was close for the remainder of the half, with the Old Liners enjoying an 18-12 advantage at the intermission. Two long goals by Berger were a feature of Maryland's offense.

V. M. I.'s attack suffered midway in the first half, when Mergenhagen was ejected on fouls. The visitors crept to within four points of the Old Liners at the start of the second half when Brown dribbled in for a two pointer.

Maryland Simply Coasts To Victory.

Led by Vincent, who scored three floor goals, Maryland quickly ran into a lead of 28-16 and easily coasted to victory. Bob Brown, forward, and Randall Gregory, guard, were the aces of the V. M. I. exhibition. Brown was top scorer, with six points, and Gregory's work at guard was of high order.

The all-round floor play of Ed Ronkin, Maryland forward, was a high spot of the contest. He scored seven points and broke up many Cadet assaults on the net.

Baron Long Loses Out As Official at Agua

Agua Caliente, Mexico, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Wirt G. Bowman, San Diego and Arizona business man, was reelected president today of the Agua Caliente Co., which controls the resort hotel, casino and golf club here and is closely allied with the Agua Caliente Jockey Club.

James N. Crofton, president of the Jockey Club, replaced Baron Long, San Diego hotel man and sportsman, as vice president of the company. Crofton also was elected secretary.

A. Murua Martinez, Tia Juana, Mexico., attorney, was elected treasurer, and A. V. Aldrete, general manager. Long retained his position on the board of directors, together with Aldrete, Martinez, Bowman and Crofton.

Despite rumors that dissatisfaction was rife among the stockholders, the directors announced that there had been no discord at the meeting.

Fat Men Come Into Own As Ballast on the Stern Of Championship Bobsled

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Special to The Washington Post.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—The Olympic winter sport of sliding down a mountain on a bobsled has caught this country unaware, and one hears many inquiries about the qualifications necessary in a successful spare man or ballast man on a coasting team whose duty is merely to sit still in a large way while the pilot steers and the brakeman in the stern yanks the brake-handle to whoa-up the sled as it goes into the turns.

An extremely phlegmatic nature would seem to be one of the essentials, because once the slide begins the spare man's life is in the hands of his colleagues, and, should he wiggle or indulge in anything like backseat driving, the bob would be likely to leap out into space or turn over.

Inasmuch as some of these bobs weigh close to a thousand pounds, mishaps of this kind are to be scrupulously avoided, and the spare man must cultivate restraint. If he fails in his great duty to do absolutely nothing, the bobsled may land all over himself and his companions, and the weight and general construction of the sleds suggest that this experience would be something like catching a locomotive in one's lap.

Bobsleds have turned over ere this on Mount Van Hoevenberg, the Olympic slide at Lake Placid, and on the mountain runs in Switzerland and Germany, and the crews generally have reported for some days afterward that they did not feel at all well. In fact, some few of them have never felt anything any more, but their relatives have felt very sad, so it is all right to risk a general statement that it is inadvisable to turn over on a bob-run.

Sedentariness has reached a high development in several sports, notably checkers and chess, and, hoping that I do not irritate an old wound, I must say that Gene Tunney did a very notable job of impromptu sitting down in the seventh round of his boxing match with Jack Dempsey in Chicago, his countenance registering that utter detachment which seems so desirable in a bobsled sitter. But the mood passed, and that was where a good judge of bobsled sitters would have disqualified Tunney for Olympic competition.

The game of auction bridge also has done much to develop the sport of sitting in this country, but there is this flaw in bridge-sitting, that the sitters get up from time to time when they are dumpy to step over to the sandwich and cocktail table or to reach across the table and wham somebody on the nose. Moreover, in this game, as the recent world series between the two systems in New York demonstrated, there is little or no trust or confidence in any one, so it would appear to cultivate the wrong psychology for bobsled work. It would not do for one member of a bobsled crew to wham another on the slide.

Another essential is a large physique, with 200 pounds as the desirable minimum, and for choice, the ballast, or spare man, should be somewhat fluid, or bluppy, because

Game Mourns Death of Wrigley

Cub Owner Is Called "King Midas" of Baseball.

Proved Business Ability by Making Winner of Cubs.

By PAUL MICKELSON.

CHICAGO, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Baseball's "King Midas" is dead. When death overtook William Wrigley, jr., at Phoenix, Ariz., today it removed from the great national pastime a man whose touch in recent years, like that of the ancient mythical king, turned everything to gold. It robbed the world of sports of one of its most powerful figures.

It was Wrigley who took over the Chicago Cubs as a weak losing baseball club and converted them into one of the biggest money earners in the history of big-time play, establishing a record for attendance in 1929 and reaping a bounteous harvest. It was Wrigley who led the movement to instill the spirit of big business into the game and make it one of the Nation's largest industries.

Tosses Many Millions Into Baseball.

He tossed an immense fortune, estimated at $6,000,000, into baseball, not as a business venture, but as a personal hobby and always insisted he never drew a nickel of the club's profits. He became a bulwark in the baseball world, the high and lowly of which mourned his passing today.

Wrigley's entry into baseball was caused by the jests of his friends. While traveling about selling gum he often heard his friends jest over the fact that a city of Chicago's size didn't own its own National League ball club. It was then owned by Charles Taft, of Cincinnati, and Wrigley promised himself he would buy the team or see that wealthy Chicago sportsmen did. In 1916 he persuaded several Chicagoans, headed by Charles Weeghman, to buy it.

The World War brought hard times to Weeghman, a restaurateur, who sold out to A. D. Lasker and Wrigley. Wrigley soon acquired controlling interest in the club and immediately started to work wonders with its organization.

Week Gets Job When He Said He Could Do It Better.

During the early days of reorganization, an incident occurred which showed one of Wrigley's business and sports characteristics and eventually led to great success for the team. A young sports writer on a Chicago newspaper wrote several articles "panning" the team and its methods. Wrigley called him in.

"What's the matter? Do you think you could do better than we are?" he asked.

The reporter said he couldn't do much worse and Wrigley hired him on the spot as the new president. The reporter, William L. Veeck, is still on the job and rated as one of the shrewdest leaders in the game.

Taking his baseball merely as a hobby, Wrigley seldom interfered with the team's policies, except on two occasions when he figured that he wanted two players. One of them, Rogers Horneby, was obtained in one of baseball's largest deals, which helped the Cubs win a National League pennant in 1929.

"Hottest Baseball Fan in World," Said Wrigley.

The other was Frank "Lefty" O'Doul. He watched O'Doul play in the Pacific Coast League and bought him without conferring with the club office. O'Doul was released after a brief trial only to come back in a Philadelphia uniform and virtually ruin the Cub championship hopes single-handed in 1930 with his home run drives.

Stories of Wrigley's love of baseball are many. Throughout the championship season, he always forced postponements of important directors' meetings in New York so they would be held while the Cubs were in the East and he could watch the games. He made millionaires in the East and West wait for hours while he watched his team play.

"I guess I'm about the hottest baseball fan in the world," he used to chuckle.

Winter Olympic Athletes Active

Representatives of 17 Nations Making Up for Lost Time at Lake Placid.

Lake Placid, N. Y., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Winter Olympics practice was in full swing here today for the first time since January 2. With knee-deep snow and bracing snap in the mountain air on their side, the athletes of seventeen nations entered for the international competition February 4-13 set about making up for lost time. High temperatures and lack of snow had held them up for weeks.

The Intervales ski jump, closed since the intercollegiate jump for the Harding trophy, January 2, because of lack of snow, was reopened today.

Members of the American ski team entered for the combined ski jumping and 18-kilometer race were practicing with jumpers of the Japanese, Norwegian, Swedish, Finnish and Italian teams. The other American jumpers will arrive tomorrow from Canton, S. Dak., where they have been in training.

The bobsled run down Mount Van Hoevenberg, a mile and one-half long, was opened for two-thirds of its length. The Italian team and the American outfits, led by H. Grayson Martin, Henry Homburger and Raymond Stevens, went into practice for the North American championships Friday and Saturday.

Ray Conger to Get Test In Newark Meet Tonight

Newark, N. J., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—A special sprint series and a 1,000-yard handicap event, in which Ray Conger, national champion, will face such stars as Frank Nordell and St. Clair Davidson, promise to supply the highlights of tomorrow night's annual indoor track and field carnival of the Newark Athletic Club.

Entries in the sprints include Ira Singer, of the Millrose A. A., national 60-yard indoor champion; Ralph Sickel, of the University of Kansas, Big Six champion; Frank Hussey, New York A. C.; Bill Bruder, Newark A. C., and Eddie Siegel, Swedish-American A. C.

Conger, running in his first important event since he captured the 1,000-yard indoor A. A. U. title last winter, will encounter some stiff competition.

14-YEAR-OLD GIRL U. S. HOPE

K. Rawls May Score America's' 1st Win in Olympic 220.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—America's chance to win the women's breast stroke swimming events in the coming Olympic games may fall in part upon the shoulders of a schoolgirl who has not yet turned her fifteenth birthday. She is Katherine Rawls, 14, who looks like a mischievous boy in her bathing suit, weighs less than a hundred pounds, stands a shade under 5 feet tall, and is a high school sophomore at Hollywood, Fla. She holds one world's swimming record and another national record.

Three afternoons a week Katherine devotes to training here, with Willis Cooling as her instructor. It was Cooling who coached Pete Desjardins, only winner of two water events in the 1928 Olympics. Katherine's short hair cut and her freckled face give her the appearance of a boy. Powerful armstrokes send her body slicing through the water like a torpedo. In dives from the big springboard, she is a picture of grace.

Set Records in New York Last Summer.

In New York last summer, she won the 330-yard medley for a national record and the 220-yard breaststroke event for a world's record in the National Amateur Athletic Union championships. Four times in the high and low spring board dives she placed second to Georgia Coleman, champion woman diver. Many regard her as a triple threat in water competition at the coming Olympic trials. She will enter the diving, free style and breaststroke swimming competition at the tryouts in New York in mid-July.

Katherine entered national competition when she was 12 years old. She looked like a skinny little boy when she placed second to Miss Coleman in the National A. A. U. championships here. She has grown since then but still she will be tiny compared to the smallest women competing against her in the Olympic trials.

America has never placed a contestant in the 220-meter breaststroke for women in the Olympics, one of the three events Katherine will enter. The others are in the 10-foot springboard diving and the 100-meter free style swimming. Coach Cooling said she probably would compete in the 400-meter relay trials.

Katherine is a daugher of W. J. Rawls, wholesale grocer at Hollywood. She is the eldest of a family of four girls and one boy, all swimmers. The youngsters also hope to get into "big time" competition in a few years.

"Little Ed" Walsh Optioned to Oakland

Oakland, Calif., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Ed Walsh, jr., son of the spitball ace of the Chicago White Sox years ago, will pitch for Oakland in the Pacific Coast League this season. He is being sent out on option by the Sox.

Young Walsh twirled for Minneapolis last year. He is a fast ball pitcher with a side arm delivery. Lew Fonseca, new manager of the White Sox, who promoted the deal, told Oakland officials he thought Walsh should be especially effective in night games on account of his speed.

Schaefer in Comeback In 3-Cushion Title Play

Chicago, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Young Jake Schaefer, the San Francisco balkline artist, today crowded himself into the running for the world three-cushion billiards title with the most brilliant performance of the tournament. Today he scored his third triumph of the tournament, requiring only 31 innings to defeat Bud Westhus, of St. Louis, 50 to 23.

Gus Copulos, of Eugene, Oreg., another veteran who got off to a wobbly start, won his third straight today, after losing two in a row. Copulos' victim was Jay Bozeman, of Vallejo, Calif., who bowed, 50 to 42 in 44 innings.

Vreeland, D. C. Boy, Wins Pistol Honors

Hamilton Vreeland, jr., of this city, won the timed-fire pistol match at 20 yards in the first series of winter indoor rifle and pistol matches conducted by the National Rifle Association. His score was 382 out of a possible 400.

In the slow-fire pistol match at 20 yards, the D. C. shooter took fourth place with a score of 349. Randolph Grimm, another local marksman placed third in the prone tyro rifle match at 50 feet, shooting against 138 competitors from all over the country. His score was 398x400, which was only one point under the winning score.

Dixie Mauler Outpoints Burns

Strickler Loses Verdict to Lawson in Semi-Windup.

By JACK ESPEY.

MORE than 2,000 .. the faithful were treated to one of the fastest bouts of the season at Portner's Arena last night as Charlie "Stumpy" Jacobs, Hopewell, Va., lightweight, outpointed two-fisted Bobby Burns, of Baltimore. This was the final and by far the most thrilling of a series of four eight-rounders, which were preceded by an uproarious preliminary.

The near-capacity crowd went home singing the praises of Dixieland's reincarnation of Battling Nelson, for Jacobs tossed leather in the manner of the old Battler himself and never ceased his fire once throughout the eight seriously-fought rounds. Burns, yes, was two-fisted, but it seemed the little Hopewell crowd-pleaser was doubly so.

Strickler Loses in Torrid Battle.

The bout that had been looked upon as the night's feature, but which was placed in the semifinal spot on a last-minut decision, resulted in a victory for Bob Lawson, handsome Newport News light-heavyweight, over Billy Strickler, rugged Washingtonian. Lawson and Strickler provided torrid action all the way, but they lacked the speed of the lighter men in the climactic event.

In the other eights Tommy Bashara, Norfolk lightweight, won . Referee Short's favor over Charlie Gomer, plodding Baltimorean, and Nick Antonelli, Mohawk Club junior lightweight, gained a decision from Kid Cosden, of Cordova, Md., The side-splitting preliminary resulted in a draw between Bingo Brodie, wild-swinging middleweight, of this city, and Young Perry, Holyoke, Mass., product after four rounds.

Living up to advance notices, Jacobs unleashed a terrifice attack at the very outset and despite a number of jolting rights which Burns delivered to his face and chin, always kept rushing his foe and throwing his gloves to all section of the anatomy.

Burns Takes Offensive In Third.

Burns took the offensive in the third, fourth and fifth sessions, shooting over a steaming right and an occasional left hook which met Jacobs squarely. However, the relentless Virginian weathered the storm without much suffering and rode into the lead on the strength of a body attack. Jacobs, in fact, often flew back at his opponent upon receiving stiff blows and refused on all occasions to retreat. In the seventh round, he rushed Burns against the ropes and clouted him with everything but the front door.

The popular Lawson, recent conqueror of Billy Schwartz, was forced to maintain a lively pace by Strickler, who was making his first appearance in a ring after a lapse of six months. The southpaw Washingtonian proved much tougher than had Schwartz, and Lawson was still fighting instead of clowning at the final bell.

Lawson drew blood from Strickler's nose in the first round, after which he concentrated his offense on this part of the Strickler property. In the close-range exchanges, he failed to annoy the local lad to any appreciable extent, but he was successful in holding him so that he absorbed few shots himself. Strickler's best round was the sixth, in which he nailed Bob on the chin and the Newport News boy sagged at the knees.

Gomer "All In" at Finish.

Bashara, who recently dropped a decision to Burns, regain some lost prestige in whipping the sluggish Gomer. The latter some months ago defeated Sailor McKenna in the same ring. Bashara swarmed on top of him, flailing away with both hands from start to finish. Gomer was legweary and unable to deliver a straight punch at the finish.

The fans received unkindly t verdict for Antonelli at the expense of Cosden, although it was the Mohawk Club boxer who "made" the fight. But for his aggressiveness, the scuffle would have been about the tamest of the season, because Cosden continually waited for Antonelli to lead. The Italian sensed the necessity of doing this at the beginning and the fact that he did so, plus a shower of vicious hooks to the stomach more than offset the weight of Cosden's hard counter-punches.

Gallagher-Brown Fight For Chance at Stribling

One of the best fights staged in Portner's Arena is promised the next Tuesday night in an Alexandria Day Nursery benefit, when Marty Gallagher, recent winner over Herman Weiner and Reds Barry, will travel the eight-round distance against Natie Brown, New York heavyweight, who not long ago fought a sizzling draw with Barry. The winner it is announced, will be given a bout shortly with W. L. (Young) Stribling, Georgia's famous knocker king, who has been knocking on the world's championship door for some time.

This bout will feature a most attractive card, calling for 32 rounds of battling. The other fights are now being arranged and will be announced shortly.

MILLS' FINE RIDE HELPS ARRAS WIN FEATURE AT HIALEAH

Neck Decision Is Lost by My Dandy

Comstockery, Victor Over Vander Pool, Is Third.

New Orleans Feature Is Captured by Glastonbury.

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., Jan. 26 (A. P.).—Arras, the most improved and honest horse of the season, came back to the racing wars to further demonstrate his ruggedness in the Leap Year Handicap, one-mile feature here today, and turned in another smashing effort to beat My Dandy by a neck. Royal Ruffin was third, beaten a length and a half for the place. Street Singer and Comstockery completed the field as named. The winner was favorite, paying $3.90 for $2.

Arras, one of the lowliest platers last summer, but now a powerful member of the handicap division, received another perfect ride from little Hank Mills and ran the mile in 1:37 flat. Comstockery, which returned to the races to beat Vander Pool here a few days ago after a layoff dating back to last August, when he was a steeplechase campaigner, never was a factor. The start played some part in the race, My Dandy getting a jump at it; while Comstockery was off very slowly.

My Dandy, after beating the gate, was allowed to step along in the van, while Mills rated Arras in second place. Finnerty shot Street Singer up fast through an opening at the half-mile pole but Mills refused to get flustered. After turning for home Mills gave Arras a powerful handride on the outside and the game colt gradually wore down my dandy in a stirring drive. Royal Ruffin overtook the tired Street Singer in the final furlong. Comstockery could not get up under the whip and on the rail.

Fair Grounds, New Orleans, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—R. A. Fairburn's Glastonbury, 4-year-old bay son of Sir Gallahad III and Bignonia, won the $1,200 Delgado Purse, feature of the racing program today. Glastonbury, returning only $1.70 for $1 mutuel ticket, ran the mile in 1.42 4-5 to take down the big end of the purse. The Three D's Stock Farm's Quatre Bras II took second money and J. Marsch's Prince Atheling was third. Mine Sweeper, Black Fool and Aunt Deb completed the field.

Havana Feature to Bess Cloi.

Havana, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—J. E. Smallman's Bess Cloi, a 4-year-old bay filly by Cloister—Bess Welch, easily accounted for the fifth race, feature of an Oriental Park program devoted exclusively to claiming platers today.

Bess Cloi was well supported and ran impressively to win without particular trouble from J. T. Ireland's Meclona with A. G. Dunlap's Queen Towton third.

Meclona dominated the early running but at the furlong pole Bess Cloi challenged and went into the lead. Jockey W. Curran allowed the Smallman plater to bear over slightly and both Meclona and Mordawn suffered from this interference.

Bess Cloi ran the 6 furlongs in 1:12 2-5 and paid 2 to 1 in the betting.

FERVID, outrun in the early stages, slipped through next inside rail entering home stretch and finished full of courage. PORT HARLEM, in rather close quarters most of the journey, had to bump her way through in stretch run and just lasted long enough to stall off MEMORIES DEAR. The latter closed strong and was gradually wearing the leaders down. VOILA and PRIORESS were used up making the pace. Latter was bumped by PORT HARLEM at sixteenth pole and knocked off her stride.

JESEMOLA broke fast on the outside and cut across her field going to the furlong pole. She broke from outside the stalls. She was ridden out all the way. ROYAL PURCHASE, breaking well, was a keen factor all the way. SWEET VA, in rather close quarters at first furlong hung on with determination under punishment. OSWEGO PRINCESS, very fractious at the post, was being backed into the stalls when barrier was sprung. MODESTO was nervous at the gate.

Latter slipped at sixteenth pole. SPANFAIR just lasted long enough to stand off a belated challenge from CATHERINE FOX. Latter went wide entire journey and finished on the outside half of track. SWEEPMAR was blocked a couple of times when she attempted to squeeze through on inside.

FOURTH RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $1,300; allowances. Tote Purse. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 3:53. Off at 3:58. Winner, G. W. Ogle's b. g. PRINCE TOKALON moved up to the leaders before they had gone a sixteenth and raced in close quarters until rounding the turn into home stretch, fought it out with GAY BIRD all last quarter. Hanford put up a strong finish than Mills, which was responsible for victory. GAY BIRD raced to his top form, saved ground all the way. MARTINELLI, running to best form, was rushed up from a slow beginning, came through leaders and took command leaving back stretch, opened up good lead around bend, but was under extreme pressure to stave off VACATION. Latter, in tight quarters around bend, closed great rush when clear and was wearing winner down with every stride. SILVERY was outrun early and closed a big gap. PLUTARCH showed early speed, but stopped. SAN PRESTO raced up to contending position on back stretch, but faltered after straightening out for stretch run. STELLANOVA was knocked back around first turn.

—Hialeah Selections—
By J. B. SNODGRASS

HIALEAH PARK, Miami, Fla., Jan. 26.—Hialeah Park features the Dade County Handicap for 3-year-olds and upward, at 6 furlongs tomorrow. Following the New York custom, this track seems to draw small fields for the feature race and large ones for the others. Numerically the smallest event on the card, the headliner promises a close contest with the five entrants.

PANETIAN, from the George D. Widener Stable, keeps winning, and is again selected in this race. On Monday this gelding beat French Lass and The Heathen in a race that had its thrills for the backers of the favorite. His race today is no harder than that one, with HELIANTHUS the contender. DON LEON, which ran well in the inaugural against Flying Heels, is next best.

FIRST RACE — DISCOBOLUS has been showing good form and was second to Span Fair last out, which race if duplicated should win this. LAST ATTEMPT can do better than last time out and rates the contender. He was third to Torealong. THE SPANIARD, which has turned in a few dull races, is expected to improve.

SECOND RACE—WOCO, second to Helios Monday, seems best of the juveniles of the second, few of the field having racing experience. STRAIGHT JACKET, which finished third to Chuck B, appears best of the others. MIKE REYNOLDS, winner of two races, both in the mud, should be a keen contender, and if track conditions should change, would have a better chance.

THIRD RACE—DEDICATE, which ran last in a recent start, at 1 to 3, is selected. He has the class of this field and should benefit by his last performance, in which he led to the stretch and quit. PARNELL BOUND is always good for a speed performance and should be the contender. DOUBLE HEART is consistent, has won two races in the South, and should hold the others safe, even COADY, which won the race in which DEDICATE was last.

FOURTH RACE—GARLIC looks best in the fourth. The G. C. Winfrey horse in his last start was second to Gay Bird, beaten a neck, and while he likes a heavy track, that race was on a fast course, and he should improve over his last. MONTANARO is rated the contender. IMPISH is always an enigma, but ranks well with these.

SIXTH RACE—FREDERICK may make it three in a row in the sixth. He has enough early speed to take such lead that the others can not catch him. SONG HIT is dangerous and should be no worse than second, and probably will be favorite. BAY ANGON is improving right along and will be bunched with the leaders.

SEVENTH RACE—GRIFFIN is the class of the seventh. This is a very large field, and horses that are not mentioned in the one, two, three selections—like TYPHOON and BEN BLAIR—may get the brackets. But on recent form, it seems that TACK should be the contender. TOP HATTIE is improving and likes a route. GRIFFIN was beaten by a long shot in his last start, but won his two previous races.

TRAINING SCHOOL LOSES.

The Ross Jewelers won one of their most important games of the year last night, downing the National Training School Five, 37-17. The Training School boys started well and held a 14-13 advantage at the half, but the Jewelers showed good offensive and better defensive work during the second half.

FAT MEN GET PLACE IN SPORTS

his weight should shift from side to side of the cockpit, according to angle, without conscious effort on his part. For this position I can suggest no better physique than the one which my friend Louis Comiskey, the son of the late Charles F. Comiskey and the present owner of the White Sox, has been carrying around for a number of years, a body job of great proportions, scaling, I estimate, about 375 pounds on the Fairbanks-Morse.

Mr. Comiskey has other qualifications. He is a gentle soul and kindly, and a believer in the idea that a man can't live forever, so what the hell? I fancy him slipping down the slide, diligently sitting in the middle and flowing from side to side of the machine, accommodating himself to the angle of the incline, his billows ballasting the sled like the water in the equilibrium tanks of a ship and whooping a joyous how-do-you-do to this world and the hereafter, if any, with never a word of criticism to the steersman or the man at the brakes.

Foursome by Himself on Golf Links.

My association with Mr. Comiskey has been rather extensive, but not sufficiently so. He is so extensive himself that it takes a long time to know him well. On a golf course, Lou Comiskey is a single-handed foursome, and in the restaurant he is a boom, and—this may be slightly irrelevant—I shall always remember the time in Shreveport, La., when his ball club was down there training, when he sorrowed for a local priest whose steeple had been carried away by a seasonal twister and dumped into one of the oily lakes in the pine woods. Mr. Comiskey generously offered to buy the Reverend Father a second-hand steeple which he had seen in storage at a steeple works nearby.

"But," said the Reverend Father, when they went out to inspect the used job, "that is a Protestant steeple—a Methodist steeple in fact."

So Mr. Comiskey turned his car around and drove back to town, where he wrote a check for a brand-new one, solving a delicate sectarian problem with a simple but expensive flourish of his pen.

This is the one sport, this bobsledding, in which the fat man comes into his own, with no trainer to tell him he must do nine miles around the reservoir tomorrow morning or swear off sweets and white bread. To develop an ambitious spare, or ballast man, for an Olympic team, a trainer would be more likely to stake him in close quarters like a Strasbourg goose and feed him much and forbid him the slightest exercise.

Future of Bobsled Ballast Man Questioned.

I suppose the question will arise whether there is any future for a ballast man on a bobsled team in which he can exploit his propensity to sit still on a commercial basis Offhand, it might seem that he could not, and yet what could be a better course of training for the professions of night-watchman and crossing-keeper? It would be not half-bad training for the judicial bench, too, and, as for the man who wishes one day to become a utility outfielder or city fireman, I can think of no course of preparation which would be more advisable than a career of sitting still and unconcerned and patient on a bobsled, with nothing to do and little liklihood of his ever having anything to do.

G. W. PLANS OUTSTANDING BASKET BALL FEATURE HERE

Strong Rival Is Being Sought

St. John's, Brooklyn Game May Be Shifted to District.

Colonials Seek Larger Gym in Which to Play Games.

GEORGE WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY'S Basket Ball Team, which has played seven games thus far without sustaining a single defeat, will meet some strong out-of-town team on a Washington court other than the small G. W. floor if plans now under consideration are carried through successfully.

Several teams have communicated with George Washington relative to scheduling games with the Colonials in Washington. The chances now are favorable that something will be done along this line inasmuch as two of the Colonials' previously scheduled contests have been canceled by Virginia Medical College. The latter found it impossible after negotiations had been completed to make a trip here on February 20, and this game, together with that arranged for February 5 in Richmond consequently was dropped.

Brooklyn Game May Be Shifted Here.

There is a possibility that St. John's, of Brooklyn, one of the strongest quintets in the country, will meet the giant Buff and Blue Team here. Another possible opponent is the fast Loyola Team, of Baltimore. Both of these clubs already have appeared here this season, St. John's having nosed out Georgetown, 27-26, and Loyola having defeated Maryland, 28-27 and Catholic U., 35-33.

In the event the Colonial authorities add another game or two to the home schedule, the G. W. Gymnasium, which has a capacity of only 700, will not be used. This hall has been taxed to overflowing for the Colonials' last three games and hundreds have been turned away before game time. However, the authorities as yet have made no headway in securing a larger place.

Seven games remain on the schedule for Coach Jim Pixlee's huskies, who conquered De Paul University of Chicago last Monday night for their seventh consecutive victory. St. John's of Brooklyn is to be met February 26 in Brooklyn, but it is possible that this game may be transferred to Washington.

Colonials Pointing for Lynching.

The Colonials yesterday began pointing for their next engagement, listed Saturday night on the H street floor with Lynchburg College. Others and the dates are: William and Mary at Williamsburg, Va., February 4; Baltimore University here, February 13; Duquesne at Pittsburgh, February 15; St. Joseph's at Philadelphia, February 25, and Rider College at Newark, N. J., February 27.

Eastern Again Defeats G. W. Freshmen Five

Eastern High's public high basket ball league leaders vanquished the George Washington Freshmen yesterday for the second time this season. The Lincoln Park quintet, led by Kane and Lieb, subdued the husky university yearlings, 29 to 26, after leading almost from the outset. The score at half-time was 18-12 and at the end of the third quarter, 23-19. Winegartner, Wickham and Gleason performed best for the freshmen.

Skinkers to Again Tackle Passon Pros

Boasting the distinction of being the first basket ball club to check the winning streak of Skinker Eagles this season, Passon professionals will be out to repeat Sunday when hostilities are renewed at Bolling Field Gymnasium. At 3 o'clock promptly Philadelphia's independent champions are to do battle with Bernie Peacock's men.

Confident that they will better their showing of last Sunday, the Eagles will be pointing for a faster getaway. Unable to get started last week, the locals had surrendered an early 21-to-9 leadership before ultimately hitting their stride.

The Philadelphia speedsters will bring to Washington the same lineup that so obviously outclassed the Eagles last Sunday. A fast preliminary starting at 2 o'clock is to precede the main attraction.

AVIATORS PLAY TONIGHT.

A double-header marks the Government League tonight, both games being carded for Bolling Field Gymnasium. Bolling Field's Team will perform in the feature contest against the Union Printers, at 9 o'clock. The preliminary matches Commerce and Interior.

TAKOMA-S. S. IN LEAD.

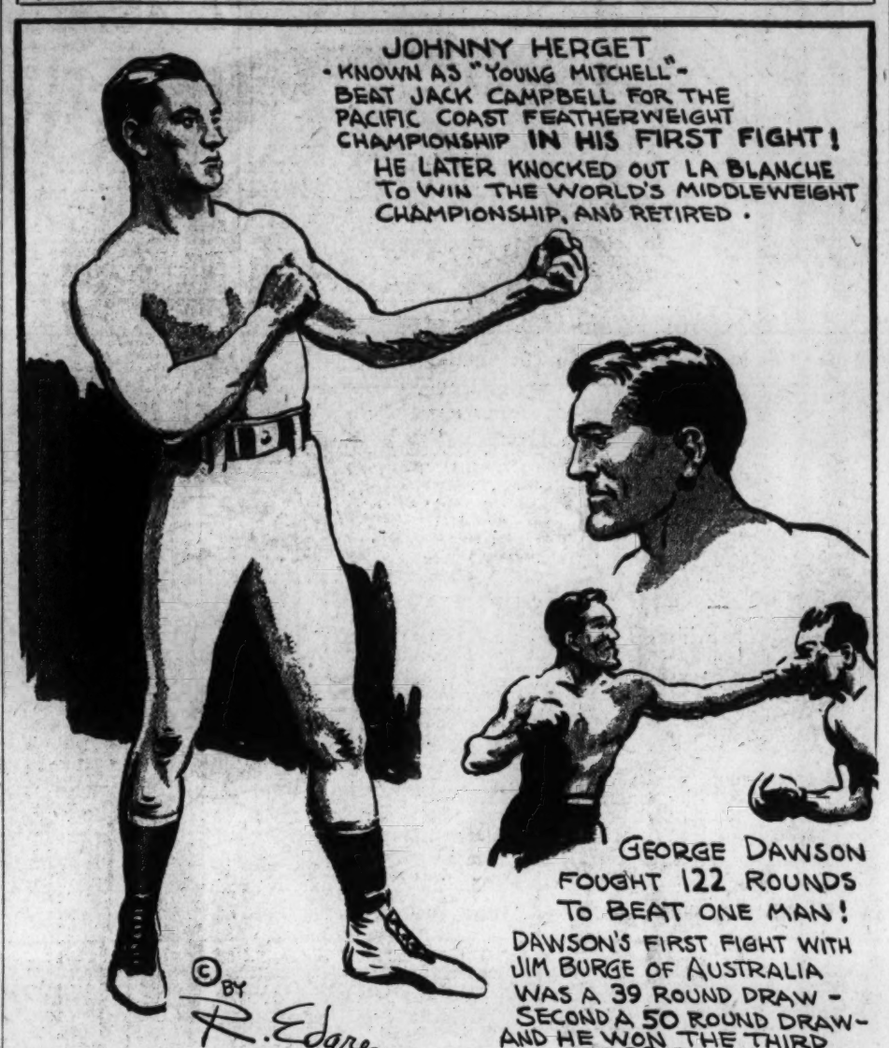
MIRACLES OF SPORTS. —By Robert Edgren



Hitting the Head Pin

By LEWIS F. ATCHISON

"HOT HANDS" ruled the Lucky Strike alleys last night when the National Capital League functioned once more and Takoma Park handed Temple a' 2-1 setback.

James, of the victors, tippled the wooden bottles for a 171 game, and garnered a 421 set, before he was through. Honey's 147 and 391 marks were high for Temple.

Takoma Park won by 609, 594 and 618 to 579, 574 and 670.

High lights of the Columbia Heights League were Rhodes' 146 game. He bowls with Cool Drinks. Chaconas, of Chaconas' Market, leveled 372 in a set, and his team had a 578 game. Crandall Realty Co.'s team caused the "shine" to set up 1,676 pins. This was at Arcadia.

In the Commerce Department League McDonnell's 139 game and 358 set was high, while Chemicals had a 561 game and 1,582 set. Team results were: Aero, 2; Airways, 1; Chemicals, 2; Evergreens, 1; Secretary's, 3; Lighthouse, 0; Supplies, 3, and Fisheries, 0.

Miss Hughes had a 124 game and a 300 set last night to top the Eastern Star Ladies' League stars. Mount Pleasant took team honors, with 490 and 1,419. Team results were: Treaty Oak, 2; Brookland, 1; Ruth, 2; Acacia, 1; Mount Pleasant, 3; Miriam, 0; Shoppers, 2; Columbia, 1.

In the Supervising Architect's League Abernathy's 145 game stood out, as did the 357 set of Fairhon The team Romans had a 555 game and 1,561 set.

Ladies' Lutheran League results were Zion, 3; St. Matthews, 0. Trinity No. 2, 3; Incarnation, 0. Grace, 3, Lutheran Place, 0. Treaty No. 1, 3; Christ Church, 0. Georgetown, 2; Takoma, 1.

Lindberg sailed high over the men's Lutheran League rollers, with a 137 game for Georgetown last night. Groff had a 341 set for St. Marks; Takoma Blues a 571 mark and St. Marks a mark of 1,619.

Kearn's 127 game and Fellows' 320 were the best individual efforts in the Postoffice League last night, at Arcadia. Team honors went to the Eels, 512, and Wrens, 1,473.

Not to be overlooked was the 150 game of Reds King, in the East Washington Church League. He followed it up with a 396 set and his team, Ingraham, No. 1 had a 581 game and 1,632 set.

The Masonic League continued in its able fashion, at Convention Hall. Tralle's 143 game was high, as was Herman's 390 mark. Gompers had a 586 game and Harmony's 1,629 was good enough to win team honors.

McElroy took command of the Marines League last night with a 128 game. Brevost's 335 was high, as were the marks 575 and 1,554 rolled by the Marine Barracks teams.

A season's record fell in the King Pin Business Men's League last night when Bill Miller, of Chestnut Farms, toppled 154 maples in his team's match with Union Wallpaper. The Dairymen took two games. Miller and Logan had a 353 set en route. In the other league game Hecht Annex beat Maccabees, 3-0.

Form held true in the Ladies' Independent League when Capitals won two from Columbia; Tiptops won two from Lansburgh's and Kann's won by forfeit.

Good bowling featured the Washington Ladies' League last night at Columbia. Team results were Shamrocks, 3; Vets, 0. Beeques, 2; University Park, 1. Keenos, 2; Hilltoppers, 1. Columbians, 3; Cardinals, 0.

Evelyn Ream, of Shamrocks, had a 136 game and Marie Whalen a 334 set. Lorraine Gulli, of University Park, rolled a 337 set, but Pauline Ford, of Columbians, came along with a 356 set and 128 game.

The boys who are on the outskirts, looking in, so to speak, get their chance to hold the stage beginning Saturday night when the second annual Suburban Sweepstakes swing into action at the Bethesda Alleys. The second block will be rolled at College Park and the final at Clarendon.

Ollie Webb, the Kensington bowler, who won the distinction of winning the first Suburban Sweepstakes, will defend his title and is expected to find much in the way of competition, for Henry Hiser, motivating figure behind the pin spilling, estimates that 50 bowlers will enter.

Among those entered to date is Gene Stevens, brother of Bobbie. Gene has an average of 99, but never misses a big league bowling sweepstakes, where he competes with the boys who sniff at 120 games. Stevens has been trying a long time, and if perseverance plays any part in bowling, may turn the trick this year.

Matters are all mixed up in The Washington Post League. It seems that the Agates, Picas and Minions are tied for first place. The Picas featured yesterday's rollings at Lucky Strike by taking all three games from the Ionics, largely the work of Pearce. Then Agates, who were out on top, lost two to the Gothics, one of the games by one pin. Minions took all three from Pearls and the Quads and the Rubies battled it out for last place, the Rubies winning the honor by losing two out of three games.

If you can figure them out you can have them—in the Ladies Internal Revenue League: S. A. C., 2, Stat., 1; A. D. M. 3, Clearing, 0; Records, 2, B. T. A., 1; Service, 2, A. R., 1. But, nevertheless, Miss Evans rolled a 131 game, A. D. M. had a 486 game and Service a 1,428 set.

Chamber of Commerce League results: Research 3, Nations 0; Files 3, Membership 0. Martin, of Nations, had a 116 game.

Willie Park's 124 game, for Central Presbyterian, his 361 set, and his team's 1,605 set were the features of the North Washington Church League matches at Columbia.

Team results were Emory 2, First Reformed 1; Columbia Heights 3, Petworth 0; Central Presbyterian 3, Gunton Temple 0; Francis Asbury 2, Wallace Memorial 1.

Australian Auto Race Driver Claims Record

Auckland, N. Z., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Norman ("Wizard") Smith, automobile racer, drove his car at an average of 164.084 miles an hour over a 10-mile course on Ninety Mile Beach near here today for what was claimed a new world record for the distance. In two dashes his average time was 3:39.401.

The roughness of the beach made the going hazardous, Smith said.

Smith, noted Australian driver, shipped his automobile from Sydney, Australia, to Ninety Mile Beach, northern New Zealand, six weeks ago in preparation for attacks upon world records.

Besides the 10-mile record, he planned to try to better the mark of 14.65 seconds for a flying start 1 mile made by Sir Malcolm Campbell, of England, at Daytona Beach, Fla., February 5, 1931. While traveling 285.133 miles an hour he believed the twelve-cylinder racing airplane engine would develop speed of 300 miles an hour.

New York, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Norman (Wizard) Smith's average speed of 164.084 miles per hour today bettered by almost 30 miles the 10-mile speed record of automobiles, according to records of the contest board of the American Automobile Association.

These records list the 10-mile mark at 137.21 miles per hour, set December 13, 1930, at Montlhery, France, by a Mrs. Shepard, piloting a Derby-Miller car.

ROCKVILLE'S HE-NIGHT FEB. 22

Ring, Mat Bouts Including Amazon Battle Royal Carded.

THE Rockville Volunteer Fire Department will hold its eleventh "He-Night" on February 22, at Congressional Airport, on the Rockville pike at Halpine, Md., about half way between Washington and Rockville. The firemen have planned to make this the best that ever has been offered and the success of their previous efforts has testified to the excellence of their offerings.

Boxing, wrestling and an Amazon battle royal will be the principal offerings for the evening's entertainment, which will begin at 8 o'clock.

Best Talent to be Secured.

The committee in charge is concentrating on securing the best bouts possible for the night and expects to offer one of the most appealing cards in the history of local sports. Seats are on sale at the Fairway Sport Shop, 1346 G street northwest; the Vic Sport Shop, 716 Ninth street northwest, and at Bill Burrows' Barber Shop in Rockville, Md.

The proceeds from the smoker will be devoted to the paying off of the mortgage on the Rockville Firehouse and equipment.

Saks Tossers Upset In Community Game

The Mount Vernon M. E. Five sent the Saks Clothiers down to a rare defeat last night, 34-33, at Central High School in the feature Community Center League game of the night. The Mounts sprung an upset by taking an early lead, and held on to it tenaciously, leading 14-13 at the half.

Monroe and Goubeau played masterful games for the Mounts.

Heurich-Logan's five won its first league victory by downing the strong Shade Shop Team, formerly the Boys Club Unlimiteds, 38-22. Stultz, Naughton and McCullough showed good form.

In the third game of the night the strong Griffith Consumers, hot favorites to win "A" league upset the up and coming Adelphites, 30-11.

FANS TO PAY AT MIDDIES' RING BOUTS

Nominal Admission for Charity Benefit to Be Charged.

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 26.—Admission to collegiate boxing contests at the Naval Academy this season will be subject to a charge of fifty cents, authorities of the institution announced today.

Popularity of the ring sport has increased to such an extent in recent years that there have been insufficient accommodations for the crowds. This moved authorities to charge a nominal admission and the resulting fund, it is expected, will go for unemployment relief or general charity, as was the case last fall when admission was charged to home football games. This set a precedent in athletic annals of the academy as admission to all athletic contests had been free.

Midshipmen will not be required to pay for admission to boxing, except when accompanied by guests. They will be given precedence in the advance sale of tickets. Tickets will be placed on public sale on the Wednesday prior to each meet.

The Middies will engage in five home meets and one away. They will open with Louisiana State on February 6. The other dates are: February 13, University of New Hampshire; February 20, University of North Carolina; February 27, Syracuse; March 5, Western Maryland; March 12, University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia.

Government League Win for Naval Hospital

Naval Hospital barely nosed out Bureau of Investigation at Bolling Field last night in a hard-fought Government League tussle, 21 to 20. The victors were given their winning edge in the last five seconds of play when Don Cummins, guard, sank one from the middle of the floor. The losers led, 13 to 8, at the half.

N. Y. Garden Head Makes Tax Appeal

Carey Asks Smaller Levy on Fight Tickets in Plea at Capitol.

William F. Carey, president of the Madison Square Garden Corporation, and one of New York's leading figures in the realm of fistiana, appeared before the House committee on ways and means yesterday and appealed for a 25 per cent reduction in the tax on boxing tickets above the price of $5.

Carey stated last night that he was unprepared to say what effect his appeal would have on the group headed by Representative Crisp, of Georgia. He stated that he was acting only for Madison Square Garden, but that boxing in general would be aided by a favorable decision.

Carey will return to New York tonight.

Little Leo, Six-Feet-Eight, Magnet of Wrestling Show

SOME ten of the muscle trade's choice exponents have been lassoed, hauled over the stockade's walls, properly stamped and addressed to Matchmaker Joe Turner, Washington Auditorium, Washington, D. C., and with proper flourishes will be exhibited here tomorrow night.

Leo Pinetzki, the 6-foot-8 Pole who headlines the show, has proved a tremendous attraction, judging from the advance sale. Pinetzki, who is the biggest man in sport, weighing 285 pounds and having an arm spread of exactly 8 feet, is down on the books to encounter the hardiest competition of his American tour, against Herbie Freeman, sturdy New York Jewish matman.

Pinetzki will not breeze on the step and off tomorrow night as he did two weeks ago when he met Don DeLaun, coldly surveyed the little 220-pound pygmie Matchmaker Turner had offered him, and sat on the French Canadian in 2½ minutes. Freeman's reputation as a sturdy oak in the grapple business is well-known and it does not seem possible that the gigantic Pole, for all his herculean strength, can do away with the New Yorker short of 30 minutes, if at all.

In fact, Freeman may astound the burghers by downing the man mountain tomorrow night. Big Leo slows up considerably after sticking to his task for a while, and may fall a victim to the machinations of the good Dr. Freeman. But, overlooking the ever-present possibility of an upset, it does not seem likely that Freeman can put all of the two-and-one-half-foot shoulders of the Pole down at the same time.

A good supporting card has been arranged. Sammy Stein, who did a standing-sitting jacknife out of Madison Square Garden's ring Monday night against Jim Londos, meets another football player in Cy Williams, former University of Florida gridman. Stein, who is one of the best-built men in the game, has not shown here since early last summer, and is reputed to have improved a great deal.

Gonzaga and Business In School Feature

Four games, involving six of the city's scholastic basket ball teams, make up today's court card. The feature affair matches Gonzaga and Business in a tussle at Buiness.

Eastern plays host to the somewhat weaker Washington-Lee High Team, from Ballston; Landon meets Georgetown Prep, at Garrett Park, and Devitt tackles Bethesda-Chevy Chase, there, in the other games.

Fort Myer and Ballston Fives in Charity Game

For the benefit of Arlington County's unemployment committee, Fort Myer's basket ball team will clash with the strong Ballston Five tomorrow night at the gymnasium of the Washington-Lee High School, Ballston, Va.

Ballston will enter the D. C. A. A. U. tournament, which begins March 1 at Tech. The team wants games Call Manager Runwell, National 9160.

Olympic Mat Trials At Columbus July 7-8

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—America's Olympic wrestling team will be selected in Columbus, July 7 and 8, Col. Waite C. Johnson, chairman of the committee in charge said today.

Approximately 112 leading amateur matmen will compete for the team. Semifinals will be held in 20 various cities, the winners being eligible to compete in the finals.

Following selection of the team the matmen, trainers and coaches will remain in training for a week before leaving for Los Angeles.

The National A. A. U. and the National Collegiate Association will select six men each in the seven weights to come here for the finals The National Y. M. C. A. will select four men in each weight.

The first class met yesterday, and will meet again today and tomorrow from 11 to 12 o'clock. D. C. GOLFERS WIN, LOSE AT MIAMI

Laudick, Nicholson Cop; Wineman Is Eliminated.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 26.—L. W. Laudick and H. W. D. Nicholson, both of Washington, D. C., won their first round matches in the annual Miami Beach championship golf tournament over the LaGorce Golf Club course here today. Laudick disposed of J. H. Davidson, of Miami, in the second flight, by one up. Nicholson trounced Mack Fisher, of Hempstead, N. Y., in the third division, 8 and 7. He completely outplayed his New York opponent, relinquishing only one hole during the entire route.

J. C. Wineman, of Washington, was not as fortunate as his fellow townsmen, for he succumbed to J. F. Sullivan, of Pittsburgh, in the sixth class one up. Wineman was eliminated when he missed a ten-foot putt on the eighteenth hole.

Perkins Near Par in Victory.

T. Philip Perkins, former British amateur champion, and winner of the qualifying medal in the current competition, was forced to approach par figures to overcome H. B. Money of Wilmington, Del., by 3 up and 2 to play. He was one stroke under par on the outgoing nine, on which he used only nine putts.

While Perkins' general game improved on the back nine, his putting became faulty and he needed a 38 for a 72. Perkins sank all putts in an effort to better par 71. On the eighteenth, he used up three putts. He sank a full mashie on the 435-yard second for an eagle deuce. Money's game improved as the match progressed but he could not overhaul the four-hole margin established by Perkins on the first half.

Army Medicos in Lead In Department Loop

The Army Medicos went into first place in the Departmental Basket Ball League last night in the Y. M. C. A. by downing the War Department five, 23-14, in a well-played game. The victors led all the way and showed a fine shot in Van Ormer, center.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

THE GARBLE SISTERS.

(They talk over the world news in general.)

"WELL, I see they're trying Ruth Judd."

"What did she do?"

"You remember. She killed that feller in Honolulu."

"Oh, you mean that murder over the attack on that American consul?"

"That's the one, I think. Some Japanese held the consul up as he was leaving a night club and a few days later Ruth Judd and some sailors caught one of them, shot him and were on the way to throw the body into the river when they were caught by the nine-power agreement or something."

"I remember it now. There's been a lot of exciting news in the papers lately. Did you read about Alfalfa Bill Murray?"

"What about him?"

"He's another holdout."

"Whadayya mean?"

"He had his pay cut $5,000 by the Giants and returned his contract with the request that he be released to Geneva."

"Do you think it will hurt the Giants much?"

"No. They've still got Father Cox and Hiram Bingham. But if you ask me, I think those baseball club owners are a tight lot."

• • • •

"Who owns the Giants now, anyhow? Albert Ritchie and Col. Ruppert?"

"No, you're thinking of the Athletics. The Giant owners are Sheriff Farley and Judge Seabury."

"Oh, yeah, that's right. This salary cutting is all the rage. I see by the papers that it's even reached Congress. Calvin Coolidge has introduced a bill to cut all congressional salaries 10 per cent or else let the country have real beer."

"Will the congressmen stand for it?"

"All except Bill Terry and Melvin Ott, I understand. By the way, I see there's a pretty interesting battle on between Al Smith and Roosevelt."

"What about?"

"The rumor is that Smith really wants the Presidential nomination and that he will announce his candidacy just as soon as Roosevelt leaves the country to take up his new post as governor of the Philippine Islands."

"Whose place is he taking in the Philippines?"

"General Dawes. Dawes resigned last week to become the new head of a movie corporation.

• • • •

"WHAT do you think of the railroad situation?"

"All I know about is that Bishop Cannon says the railroad workers will not stand for a general cut and that when the whole matter is threshed out at Lausanne America will not have any formal representative there except that new president of the Reconstruction Corporation."

"Art Shires?"

"No, Steve Hamas."

STOCK PRICES CLOSE WITH SMALL GAINS

Rails Rally as Industrials Join Upward Trend in Quiet Trading.

New York, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Stocks held firm in quiet trading today, closing with small net gains for most of the leading issues. Operations were obviously dominated by the imminence of the United States Steel directors' meeting, results of which, as usual, became public property after the close. Sentiment was helped somewhat by the firm tone in the bond market, especially in United States Governments.

The poor fourth quarter earnings statement issued by the Steel Corporation confirmed evidence previously offered by the low and unprofitable operating ratio of the company's subsidiaries during the three months.

However, the deficit was large and a substantial draft on surplus, which has been drawn on heavily for dividend payments in the last year, was necessary to support even the preferred disbursement.

Cotton Belt Soars.

Routine transactions in stocks were enlivened a bit by a mark-up in the Cotton Belt Railroad issues. The preferred shares of that road soared more than a dozen points and the common at its best sold more than 2 higher, reflecting, of course, the Southern Pacific decision. Also, Woolworth took a spurt during the afternoon and closed with a gain of 2¼.

American Telephone's net advance of 1½ was larger than the rise of many other pivotal stocks, which averaged fractionally higher. U. S. Steel, moving in a one-point range, sagged slightly in the late dealings when some traders appeared to feel that maintenance of the $1 dividend was highly conjectural. New York Central was slightly heavy; otherwise rails refused to do much. Trading was so stagnant that total sales fell below Monday's volume, amounting to 765,363 shares.

The mild strength of U. S. Government securities was probably based in part on growing indications that Congress is to fall in with the balanced-budget idea and will cooperate toward holding down expenditures.

Federal Borrowing Fears.

One of the most unsettling influences in recent months has been a fear that the Government might be forced to continue its heavy borrowing and moves to minimize or eliminate such a possibility are warmly welcomed in banknig circles.

Considerable attention was paid to the Bank of England's ability to meet its Franco-American credit without future loss of gold. England has recently been receiving large gold shipments from India, whose population holds in hoards untabulated amounts of the metal. It is apparently from this treasure store that the gold is now coming, since the Indian government's reserves actually increased after the movement started.

That deflationary tendencies are still at work in this country was evident from the weekly statement of reporting member banks which continue to liquidate both security and other loans. Central banking authorities are worknig to stop the decline in bank credit, pointing out that the movement in recent months has been motivated, generally speaking, by fear rather than necessity.

BOND MARKET RISES UNDER RAIL FLURRY

Cotton Belt Line Issues Gain 13 to 19 Points; Sales, $10,755,000.

New York, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Under the stimulus of a somewhat sensational rise in St. Louis Southwestern bonds, transportation loans turned upward today.

The Southwestern, or "Cotton Belt," liens gained from 13⅞ to 19 points and various other low-priced carrier mortgages closed with moderate advances, although reacting from their top prices of the day.

The flurry in "Cotton Belt" followed a decision by the Interstate Commerce Commission premitting the Southern Pacific to acquire control of this line. The loans of other roads were aided by prospects of early relief from the new Reconstruction Finance Corporation and also hold that the wage reduction conference in Chicago would be concluded satisfactorily.

At the same time United States Government obligations were in demand at moderately higher prices. Industrial and utility securities attempted to follow the rails upward, but in late trading they sagged for fractional average losses. A number of these issues, however, maintained a firm undertone.

Among rail liens that closed substantially higher were some of Canadian National, Canadian Pacific, Chicago Great Western, Chicago & Northwestern, Rock Island, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, Great Northern, M., K. & T., Missouri Pacific, New York Central, Northern Pacific, Pere Marquette, Nickel Plate, Frisco, Southern Railway, Texas & Pacific and Wabash. Southern Pacific did not trail the "Cotton Belt," but closed steady.

The foreign list was generally firm. German Government 5½s and 7s were up from 1¾ to 2½ points in heavy trading. Canadian bonds were firm, as were those of Argentine, Great Britain, Italy and Japan.

The average for 20 principal rail liens was up 7-10 of a point. Sales totaled $10,755,000.

Receivership Is Sought For American Equities

Wilmington, Del., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—A petition for the appointment of receivers for the American Equities Co., a holding company of New York, was filed today in the U. S. District court by Emil Mautner, of Essex County, N. J., owner of 1,500 shares of the company's capital stock.

The bill of complaint alleges the company is insolvent, unable to meet maturing obligations and is unable to get bank credit. Mautner alleges since the issuance of a statement April 30, 1931, listing assets at $37,038,000 the corporation has lost $32,000,000 in the value of its assets.

When Washington Was Younger—No. 176

Armstrong was killed by a hold-up man named McHenry in Union Station several years ago. McHenry was arrested, convicted and electrocuted at the District Jail. Grant was at one time middle-weight wrestling champion of the world, and is now employed as house detective at Lansburgh's. Lieut. Hartley, who retired as a captain, died from the effects of a cat bite in Florida last year.

CURTIS MAKES PLEA FOR U.S. DEFENSE IN CHAMBER FETE TALK

Many National and District Notables at Celebration of 25th Anniversary.

The advice of George Washington that the country be kept in a state of complete national defense was never more necessary than at the present time, Vice President Charles Curtis declared in an address last night at the twenty-fifth anniversary banquet of the Washington Chamber of Commerce at the Mayflower Hotel. Of equal importance, he said, is the need for deporting alien criminals and racketeers.

Featured by the showing of the bicentennial talking motion picture, "Washington—the Man and the Capital," the banquet was dedicated to the celebration which takes place this year. An address was made by Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Bros., Inc., the producers and contributors of the motion picture. Clarence Whitehill, who impersonated George Washington in the film, was a guest of honor. Mr. Whitehill, who is a barytone with the Metropolitan Opera Company, rendered several songs popular during the lifetime of George Washington.

The gathering of more than 500 gave the Vice President an ovation when he rose to speak and at the conclusion of his address. He evoked loud applause when he made his plea for national defense and deporting of alien criminals.

Urges Need of Defense.

"It would be wonderful," he declared, "if the strong nations of the earth would agree upon a plan of disarmament which would reduce their armies and navies to the smallest strength needed for defense. But the fear of offense keeps them from doing so. Unless all will disarm, none will. So we must keep both our Army and Navy strong enough for complete national defense—likewise that new branch of defense—the air force.

"We hope for, have done and are doing everything possible to bring about world peace," the Vice President continued, "but it must be peace with honor. Peace not involving us in the quarrels of other nations. George Washington's advice of no entangling alliances might almost have been given with present-day conditions in mind. He was, indeed, clear-thinking and far-seeing.

"We must rid our beloved country of all alien criminals and racketeers," he declared. "As I have said more than once, the sooner such aliens are deported the better it will be for all."

Praises Washington.

Vice President Curtis devoted a large portion of his remarks to George Washington, and gave a synopsis of the outstanding accomplishments in the first President's career. He complimented the chamber on the part it has taken in the bicentennial by sponsoring the motion picture which will be shown all over this country and in other parts of the world.

The Vice President was introduced by Thomas P. Littlepage, second vice president of the chamber, who was master of ceremonies. George A. G. Wood, acting president of the organization, presided.

Mr. Warner made an appeal for stronger faith in the moving picture industry, asking for less criticism and the cultivation of a habit of looking for the good in the business rather than the bad. He predicted that the moving pictures will act as a powerful medium in bringing about world peace through the ultimate establishment of a universal language.

First Public Showing.

In regard to the bicentennial picture, he said that he has personally guaranteed any losses that the picture may sustain so as to protect stockholders.

The picture, which was given a public showi for the first time last night, merges the principal events in the life of Washington with the city of today which he visioned. The story is told by the voice of a veteran guide at the Capital as he stands with a boy and girl before the large painting of the first President in the rotunda of the Capitol.

Washington is depicted as "first in war," through scenes leading to victory in the Revolution; "first in peace," as he struggled to form a Union of the States, and "first in the hearts of his countrymen" as he submitted to persuasion to become the first President. Airplane views of Washington and direct views of the city's principal buildings are then shown. The main object of the production is to create national interest in the bicentennial and encourage Americans to visit the Capital this year.

Tribute to Curtis.

Strickland Gillilan, noted humorist, told the story of how he created his famous poem, "Off Again, On Again Finegin," and recited it to Vice President Curtis who had not heard the lines before. Mr. Gillilan predicted that Vice President Curtis would be one Vice President who would be remembered three years after he goes out of office.

Entertainment was given by Bernice Claire and Ed Miller and Johnny Burke who are appearing at local theaters; George O'Connor, popular Washington singer, the Glee Club of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., and Meyer Goldman's Orchestra. Homer Rodeheaver, former song leader with Billy Sunday, who came from New York for the banquet, led the gathering in singing of "There's a Rainbow Shining Somewhere." Mr. Whitehill sang "Annie Laurie," "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes" and several other old-time compositions.

Guests included senators, representatives, a Cabinet member, District Commissioners, other local officials and many others outstanding in national and city life. A number of them were introduced.

ERA OF STRESS HELD POINT FOR MARRIAGE

Social Hygiene Society Sees Improved Facilities for Care of Sick.

That present conditions are bringing wider recognition of marriage and homemaking as vital to social welfare seems to be the opinion of social hygiene workers throughout the country, declared Paul L. Benjamin, executive secretary of the local Social Hygiene Society, at a meeting of the board of directors of the society held late Tuesday afternoon at the Y. W. C. A.

"At the same time," said Mr. Benjamin, "there is developing an increased care for patients in need of treatment. In one year the practice of physicians in New York City has decreased 40 per cent. Unless treatment facilities are available to such patients they menace the entire community."

Mrs. Julius Lansburgh reported upon the effective use of scholarships which have been given in the past by the society to colored leaders to take special training in the field of social hygiene and family relationships.

Mrs. Thomas R. West, chairman of the legislative committee, urged the necessity for a congressional appropriation for the establishment of an additional sociay hygiene clinic in the District. She stated that interviews are being held with members of Congress in regard to such an appropriation. Mrs. Maurice Rosenberg, secretary of the speakers' bureau of the society, declared that many requests are coming to the organization for lectures from women's clubs, Parent-Teacher Associations and other organizations.

The board presented a resolution of regret at the serious loss it has sustained through the death of Mrs. Grace Ross Chamberlin, who has been one of the active members of the society for a number of years.

Dr. William A. White, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital, presided at the meeting.

No Alcohol in Jug, 3 Suspects Freed

Testimony of Government Chemist Ends Trial After Raid.

To the suspicious eyes of a member of a police raiding squad which entered the lunchroom at 1029 Sixth street northeast, anything in a gallon jug was "liquor." At any rate, the raider took possession of the jug and took it to the Government chemist for an analysis.

In the meantime a charge of maintaining a nuisance and possession of liquor had been filed against Charles and Allie Washington and Andrew Shelton, who were found in the place.

The case was set for trial yesterday and it was proceeding until the Government chemist, Dr. Albert A. Spear, testified there was no alcohol in the contents of the jug, that it appeared to be filled mainly with soap suds. The defendants were acquitted.

Students to Entertain St. Elizabeths Patients

St. Elizabeths Hospital patients will be entertained tonight by students of the Lou Langlotz School of Expression in a varied presentation of song and dance numbers, "Treasure Land."

Figuring prominently in the entertainment, which will begin sharply at 7:15, will be Lillie Lieberman, Dorothy Morrow, the Ferry sisters, Elaine Sheehy, Shirley Bremner, Dorothy Greber, Edith Lathoff, the Meyer sisters, Tony Sainotz and Lou Rea Langlotz.

Two Girls Running Away Detained in Greenup, Ill.

Two District high school girls made their way as far as Greenup, Ill., on their way to Neosho, Mo., before their runaway expedition was halted, police revealed last night. The brother of one of the girls, E. H. Love, of 1020 Monroe street northwest, left yesterday to bring them back.

The girls, Alice Joress, 15 years old, of 1320 Fairmont street northwest, and Odella Love, 13, ran away last Friday to make their way to Odella's former home in Missouri. By Monday they had gotten as far as Illinois, where they were taken into custody by the Greenup woman's bureau. The District Women's Bureau was notified, and Mr. Love left immediately to get his sister and her friend.

Woman Neighbor of Crosby Is Beaten by Alms-Seeker

Three police radio cars and a headquarters cruiser with four detectives last night hurried to an apartment house at 2540 Massachusetts avenue northwest, the address of Police Commissioner Herbert B. Crosby, in response to a report of a holdup.

The crews of the radio cars from the Eighth and Third Precincts were first to reach the scene. Six uniformed policemen entered the building and were told the trouble was in an apartment on the second floor.

There they found Mrs. Nellie Quayle, 28 years old, wife of Dr. Edgar E. Quayle. She exhibited a severely bruised face and head, received, she said, when struck and knocked down by an unidentified man who appeared at her door and asked for money.

The man, Mrs. Quayle declared, knocked at her apartment shortly after 6 o'clock. He told her his family was in dire need of money and asked if she would contribute. When she refused, Mrs. Quayle said, the man struck her violently in the face, knocking her to the floor. He fled, she said, before aid could be summoned.

Headquarters detectives experienced difficulty in gaining entrance to the building. A switchboard operator declared she knew of no trouble, and when they finally reached the apartment were refused admittance.

A search was started for a man about 40 years old wearing a gray suit and cap.

HOUSE WILL DEBATE PAY-RAISE BANS AND VACANCIES IN POSTS

Controversial Provision of Agriculture Measure Comes Up Today.

SIMMONS TO REQUEST RECOMMITTAL OF BILL

Byrns Will Lead Fight for 5 Per Cent Reduction in Department Force.

Restrictions on pay increases and filling of vacancies in agriculture personnel will be the first order of business in Congress today, as the House concludes consideration of its first appropriation bill.

Paving the way for favorable action on the provision, which will establish a precedent for all other appropriation acts, the House has approved a rule making the restrictions in order.

But apparently the two disputed sections contain ample material for lengthy debate, for the bill was read through to this point yesterday and adjournment then taken.

Simmons to Ask Recommittal.

Following action on these provisions, and after the bill is reported out of committee of the whole, Representative Robert G. Simmons (Republican), Nebraska, will offer his motion to recommit the bill calling for a 5 per cent reduction in Agriculture Department personnel.

The Simmons proposal will be opposed by Chairman Joseph W. Byrns of the appropriations committee. It probably will be defeated.

Later the House may commence consideration of the Interior Department supply bill. It likewise contains provisions prohibiting increases in pay within grades and restricting filling of vacancies without presidential sanction.

Secretary of the Interior Wilbur may oppose this and other curtailments in the bill when it reaches the Senate. Yesterday he expressed belief the appropriations committee has cut the measure "below the survival figures."

Union Official Opposes Plan.

Miss Gertrude McNally, secretary of the National Federation of Federal Employes, voiced bitter opposition to the two sections in the Agriculture and Interior Department bills forbidding pay increases and limiting the filling of vacancies.

"In the opinion of the federation," she said, "the adoption of sections 2 and 3 of the Agriculture appropriations bill are a greater detriment to administrative officials than to individual employes, inasmuch as they make difficult, if not impossible, the efficient carrying on of the activity of the department."

As the policy sought to be adopted is now in effect in the department through executive order, she declared the legislation "proposes no new thing."

Trolley Operator Saved From Gas Peril in Home

The condition of De Witt Brown, 47 years old, street car motorman, who was found unconscious from gas fumes in his home at 223 Eighth street northeast, yesterday morning was still regarded as serious at Casualty Hospital last night.

The man was found by wife, Mrs. Stevie Brown. She told police gas was flowing from a tube attached to a wall jet and that the end of the tube was on the bed where her husband lay unconscious. Members of the fire rescue squad and a Casualty Hospital physician were called. Attempts were made to revive Brown at home before he was taken to the hospital.

TRACTION MERGER HEARINGS IN HOUSE TO START TONIGHT

Street Railway Company and Utilities Board Heads Are Called.

EMPLOYMENT SITUATION EFFECT TO BE STUDIED

Chairman Black Will Favor Combine if Service Is Improved.

Officials of the Public Utilities Commission and local traction companies will be questioned closely on the merits of proposed merger legislation, at hearings at 8:30 tonight of the Public Utilities subcommittee of the House District Committee. Hearings will be held in the House committee room.

Representative Loring M. Black, jr., (Democrat), New York, chairman of the subcommittee, made known he will question witnesses closely on likely effect of a street car merger on the local employment situation.

Opposing mergers generally, the subcommittee chairman made known that he favors consolidation here if the public will benefit from improved service. He intends to scrutinize closely provisions bearing on valuation and issuance of securities, he said.

To Favor Track Damages.

The Black subcommittee this morning will report favorably to the House District committee the Smith bill to revoke the franchise and award damages to the Mount Vernon, Alexandria & Washington Railroad, for loss of its tracks in the city. Representative Allard H. Gasque, (Democrat), South Carolina, will oppose award of any damages. The full House District committee will meet first in executive session to weed out nonessential District bills before the group.

Notices of tonight's merger hearings were sent out yesterday to Chairman Mason M. Patrick of the Public Utilities Commission, and all traction line executives.

Most of the ground has been gone over at previous merger hearings, and Representative Black does not think it will be necessary to repeat much of the testimony.

Witnesses Oppose Bus Taxes.

A number of local traction officials appeared before the House ways and means committee yesterday in opposition to the proposed tax of 3 cents a mile on interstate buses.

Service of the Washington Rapid Transit Co., by reason of its lines to nearby Maryland suburbs would be affected "seriously" by the tax, E. D. Merrill, president of the company, told the committee.

Opposition also was voiced by C. D. Cass and A. K. Barta, of the American Electric Railway Association. Although opposing the tax, President John H. Hanna, of the Capital Traction Co., did not attend the hearing. He said his company's lines would not suffer greatly because of the tax.

Two Sherman Square Yule Trees Considered

Plans for use of two community Christmas trees in Sherman Square, each to be decorated for display on alternate Christmases, were discussed yesterday in the Office of Public Buildings and Public Parks.

The constant use of the one tree now in service has been too much of a strain on its health. It has seen three years of service. It succeeded a large tree which died after exposure to the decorations and lights of several Christmas celebrations.

Economics Study Teaches Fine Art of Saving Money

From what she has learned in a home economics course Mrs. Mabel Caulk, 2829 Seventh street northeast, has reduced the weekly grocery bill to $10 and doubled her savings.

Budget Keeping Termed Way to Have More in Marriage.

Go to night school, young woman, and take a course in home economics if you want to save money.

Depression or no depression, it seems that two, with budget system, can live cheaper than one, without one, and save money to boot.

Skeptical? So were we until Mrs. Mabel Caulk, 2829 Seventh street northeast, a student in home economics at the McKinley evening school, was interviewed.

Mrs. Caulk, who is married and works in an insurance office, always had trouble making both ends met. She was able to save a small amount from the average income of her salary and that of her husband; but not enough to run the savings account into three figures.

Since she began taking the course in home economics last September, Mrs. Caulke declares, she has saved $300 more than in any similar period during her five years of married life, and has doubled her savings so far this year.

By applying to her home what she is learning about budgeting and economy, Mrs. Caulk is able to keep food expenditure within $10 a week. This gives the couple a properly balanced diet. Some weeks she doesn't spend as much as $10, and at such times she uses what is left over for staples.

Mrs. Caulk's employer has been admiring her clothes, and recently expressed wonderment as to how she could dress so well on what she made. On this particular day, Mrs. Caulk happened to be attired in a made-over dress—and most of her other outfits are made over. She learned how to do this from her course in sewing. Half of the home economics course is devoted to sewing and the other half to cooking.

Mrs. Caulk believes that two can live as cheap, if not cheaper, than one on any reasonable salary. "It isn't how much you get," she explained, "it's how you budget it."

THEATER MEASURE PASSED BY SENATE

Bill Specifying Signs Telling Seating Capacity Sent to House for Vote.

Misrepresentation of theater seating accommodations will be subject to penalty in the District, if the Carey theater bill, passed yesterday by the Senate, receives equally favorable treatment in the House.

The bill passed without discussion. It requires theater operators to display a sign with letters 2 inches high, stating that no seats are available, after seating accommodations are exhausted.

The sign must be placed in the ticket booth and be visible from the entrance or lobby. If the theater has more than one floor, then separate signs must be displayed indicating the floor on which seats are not available.

Where the seating capacity is 1,000 or more, a public announcement must be made in the entrance or lobby at least once every five minutes during the time the seats are occupied. Violations would be punishable by a fine of not more than $100.

Original restrictions on tickets sold in excess of the number of seats were removed by the Carey subcommittee after theater managers testified this would be disastrous to a continuous operation policy. The managers expressed no opposition to the sign provision. A resolution was adopted by the Motion Picture Owners Association calling on members to put this rule in practice.

One local relief bill was passed by the Senate yesterday, authorizing the licensing of Dalla D. Ledendecker to practice chiropractic in the District. Dr. Ledendecker, because of illness, failed to comply with the 90-day license provision under the act to regulate the healing art in the District, passed in February, 1929.

POLICEMAN ON TRIAL DENIES BEATING BOY

Clark on Stand; Bremerman to Be Heard Today as Case Nears Jury.

The end of the three weeks trial of Policemen Hollis H. Clark and Charles R. Bremerman neared yesterday as Clark took the stand in his own defense and testified more than three hours. Only Bremerman must be heard before the trial closes; he is scheduled to take the stand today.

Clark entered a general denial to the charge that he and his fellow officer used sticks, billies, or blackjacks on Thomas M. Williams, 17-year-old colored boy, to obtain from him and several other boys confessions to half a dozen petty crimes.

He said confessions from Williams and the others were obtained after hours of questioning. He denied that any one hit any of the prisoners, who were being questioned in the sergeants' room at the Second Precinct Station last June.

Justice F. D. Letts several times interrupted the trial to speed up presentation of the case. He often broke up "discussions" between Attorney O'Shea and William A. Gallagher, assistant United States attorney, with the admonition that "this has gone far enough."

With Bremerman testifying all day today, there is a chance that the case might be placed in the hands of the jury by tomorrow night. Attorneys have indicated that they collectively would take an entire day to argue the case, and Justice Letts' charge to the jury will consume more than an hour.

Clark and Bremerman were indicted for allegedly beating Williams on three occasions with a stick. They were among the policemen whose alleged brutality was investigated by Department of Justice agents.

Woman, 70, Injured by Cab.

Mrs. Annie Lemoir, 70 years old, of 335 Sixth street southeast, was treated for a bruised left knee and shock yesterday after she was knocked down by a taxicab operated by Edwin R. Clements, 25 years old, of 1419 Morse street northeast. The accident happened at Tenth and E streets northwest.

CITIZEN BODY ASKS RENEWAL OF 60-40 CAPITAL FUND PLAN

Joint Committee on Fiscal Relations Sends Appeal to Congress.

DISTRICT RESIDENTS HELD HEAVILY TAXED

Take Issue With Mapes Bill; Levies Called Adequate; Rejection Urged.

Both Houses of Congress were petitioned yesterday to return District appropriations to the former 60-40 definite proportion basis by a delegation representing the citizens joint committee on fiscal relations.

Headed by Edward F. Colladay, the committee placed copies of the petition in the hands of Vice President Curtis and Speaker Garner. They were referred, respectively, to the Senate and House District committees.

Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), Kansas, chairman of the Senate District committee, before which a bill to abolish the 60-40 plan and four bills to increase local taxes are now pending, announced he would give the joint petition thorough study.

All Passed by House.

All five of the bills have been passed by the House and are now undergoing the perusal of the Bureau of Efficiency. The citizens joint committee on fiscal relations will have another chance to be heard when Senator Capper holds hearings on the bills, following their return from the Efficiency Bureau.

Signed by 22 representative citizens from constituent or cooperating organizations, the petition presented yesterday urged rejection of the House bill to repeal the old 60-40 law.

"We contend first that the United States should contribute largely to the maintenance and upbuilding of the National Capital," the petition read; "second, that this proportion should be 60-40—60 by the District tax payers and 40 by the United States."

Tracing the history of fiscal relations between this municipality and the Federal Government, the petition took issue with the Mapes report, approved by the House, which asserted that District taxpayers are not bearing an adequate tax burden.

Claims Citizens Heavily Taxed.

"The citizens joint committee contends that the District tax payers are now reasonably, and, in view of their peculiar disabilities, even heavily taxed, and that no increase in their tax burden should be considered unless it is clearly demonstrated that such additional taxation is absolutely necessary to meet urgent municipal needs, which can not otherwise be satisfied."

If the lump sum basis is continued by Congress, the committee asked that it be substantially increased, that great national or seminational projects be excluded from the District bill, that a local as well as a national maximum lump sum be established, and that a referendum be held to give local residents a say in their own tax program.

The petition was signed by Mr. Colladay, Theodore W. Noyes, George W. Offutt, Harry King, C. H. Pope, J. F. M. Bowie, Percy Thompson, Robert V. Fleming, Joshua Evans, jr., R. A. Dickson, Katherine S. Meritt, Ethel Olin Corbin, George C. Havenner, Mark Lansburgh, George P. Hoover, Evan H. Tucker, Eugene R. Woodson, L. A. Carruthers, E. G. Bliss, Ruth S. McKelway, Agnes B. Husband and M. Pearl McCall.

Policeman's Death Is Held Accidental

Private Coffren, Drowned as Canoe Overturns, to Be Buried Friday.

Following an inquest into the drowning of Private Robert L. Coffren, Traffic Bureau policeman of this city, a Prince William County, Va., coroner's jury yesterday gave a verdict of accidental death.

Coffren met his death when his fishing canoe overturned in Neabsco Creek near Occoquan Bay, Monday night. Two other Washington policemen, Privates P. M. Cox and Lester Collins, of the First Precinct, were on the trip with Coffren, but swam to shore.

The drowned policeman, who was 34 years old, had been stationed at Twelfth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest for several years. He lived at 1276 Morse street northeast and is survived by his widow, Mrs. Julia Coffren; his mother, and two children, Barbara, 4, and Robert, 7.

The body was brought to Washington last night and taken to the Hanlon undertaking establishment, at 641 H street northeast. Funeral services will be held Friday morning at 9 o'clock at the Holy Name Church, Eleventh and K streets northeast. Interment will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

400 in Northeast Group at Banquet

Van Duzer and Police Officials Among Guests of Business Men.

More than 400 members of the Northeast Business Men's Association last night celebrated their annual banquet at the Raleigh Hotel.

William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic; Inspector William Stott, Capt. William Holmes of the First Precinct, and Capt. Michael Raedy of the Ninth Precinct were among the guests present.

There were no speeches, except that of Toastmaster Joseph P. Bailey, who, on behalf of the association, presented Past President John M. Beane with a cocktail set.

Following the dinner, Mr. Bailey turned over the entertainment features to Jack Mullane, who introduced a galaxy of girls. Matt Horne and George O'Connor sang.

Man Ruins Door and Sash But Loses in Police Chase

A man who tore through a door without waiting to open it, and then dived through a closed second-story window in an effort to escape an interview with Detective Sergts. Brodie and Dowd was on the books at the Second Precinct station last night for investigation and was personally in Gallinger Hospital for treatment of a jagged cut in his arm.

The detectives said they were in a store at 1224 Seventh street northwest when the man entered with a coat on his arm. He hurriedly placed it on a counter and mumbled something about "having to see about my auto," and hurried out.

Brodie and Dowd said their suspicions were aroused and they trailed the man in their automobile to O street and Freedman's alley northwest, where he suddenly cut and ran down the alley. The detectives said at 600 Freedman's alley their quarry burst through the door and ran to the second floor.

One of the detectives followed and the man dived through the second-floor window, taking out sash and pane, described a flip, and landed on his feet. Sergt. Brodie pounced on him. At the station he gave his name as Robert Campbell, colored, 22, of 1822 Oregon avenue northwest.
